Budget Balance, Boost in Taxes Asked by Eccles

Reserve Board Chairman Seeks Profits Levy to Prevent Inflation.

Boosts in Prices Laid to Strikes

Charge Destitute Will Bear Load Is Denied; Congress Alarmed.

Text of Eccles' statement—Page 14.

By William V. Nessly.

Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, declaring the Government's easy-money policy is to be continued, last night called for prompt balancing of the budget, with higher taxes on income and profits, if necessary, to prevent monetary inflation.

The suggestion of higher taxes came as a surprise to members of Congress, who showed little enthusiasm over the proposal. There has been general understanding in Congressional circles that attempts at tax revision upward would be avoided.

In a statement issued "to correct erroneous interpretations which have been circulated with reference to my position on credit and monetary policies," Eccles publicly recognized the problem presented by recent sharp increases in commodity prices, a problem that has engaged the earnest attention of Administration leaders.

Cites Strikes, Monopolies.

He held the rises were due to nonmonetary factors, among which he named "strikes and monopolistic practices by certain groups, both in industry and organized labor," while foreign armament demands were charged with responsibility for some of the increases. Resulting speculative and commodity buying accelerated the rises, he said.

Controlling price rises "at this stage of the recovery" by a restrictive money policy was opposed in the statement on the ground that it would tend to freeze and might bring about "an actual reduction in the total volume of employment and production." He pointed to the large number of jobless as showing the Nation's full productive capacity is not being utilized, and held that money must be available to increase production and employment. Greater production can control "unjustifiable" price advances, he held, so long as there is idle labor, unused natural resources and plenty of money at reasonable rates.

Urges Debt Retirement.

Success of an easy money policy in achieving a balanced recovery, he said, depends on prompt balancing of the budget and the subsequent retirement of the public debt. Denying he was urging a balanced budget at the expense of the destitute, Eccles said he favored increasing taxes on income and profits if that was necessary to

Of the higher tax proposal, Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic leader, commented to the Associated Press:

"Let's go slow about increasing taxes."

Representative Winson (Democrat), Kentucky, a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, was quoted as saying "I think we have plenty of taxes now."

Representative Treadway, Massachusetts Republican, among those quoted by the Associated Press, said higher taxes would be "absolute confiscation" in view of the "extravagance of the Administration."

Senator Townsend (Republican), Delaware, ranking minority member of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, said:

"He (Eccles) has made a very important statement to which we all must give serious thought. But it is obvious that he is beginning at the wrong end. The goal he proposes is desirable, but it should be reached by curtailing expenses and not by increasing taxes."

Soaring prices came in for other comment, in an address by Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, who said at the meeting of the American Industrial Development Council:

"Perhaps the most important factor that will determine the extent of the present recovery is the price level. During the past year American industry has been increasing the size of its pay rolls, both by giving more employment and by giving wage rate increases to its workers. Of course such wage rate increases add to the cost of producing the goods that industry must sell."

H. S. Cullman's Safety-at-Sea Activities Hit

New Yorker Charged With Break-up of Accident-Prevention Unit.

"Personal publicity activities" of Howard S. Cullman, of New York, are responsible for dissolution of the sub-committee on sea safety appointed by the Accident Prevention Conference, Labert St. Clair, director of the conference, said in a letter to Cullman made public here yesterday by Secretary of Commerce Roper. Both Roper and St. Clair replied to Cullman's letter to the former.

The conference was convened by Roper in December, 1935, at request of President Roosevelt, and its subcommittees were chosen also by the Commerce Secretary. Among these was the sea safety group, headed by Walter Parker, of New Orleans.

"Shortly after the appointment of Mr. Parker's sub-committee," St. Clair's letter said, "there began to appear statements from a group calling itself the national committee on safety at sea, and carrying on its stationery the statement, 'Formed by the Secertary of Commerce at the President's Request.' Your name appeared as vice chairman. Neither the Secretary nor the conference ever authorized the formation of such a body as the 'national committee on safety at sea,' or ever invited you to serve as a member or a vice chairman of any committee or sub-committee."

Cites "Personal" Views.

"The immediate appearance of numerous statements attacking the safety of American vessels, which emanated from your office but were made to appear as a part of the conference activities, caused inquiry to be made as to your status. Chairman Parker said he had appointed you at the solicitation of some of your friends, and that you are voicing personal opinions in many of your statements instead of expressing committee views.

"Coincident with the writing of this letter (from Parker) you became active in demanding payment of a bill for $360 acquired in connection with publicity issued from your office. I submitted the bill to the committee, as I had told you I would do, and the committee voted not to recommend payment of the bill.

"The facts regarding the activities of various safety at sea groups also were presented to the executive committee, and it was unanimously decided to terminate the activities of the existing sub-committee on safety at sea."

Questions Answered.

Roper, in reply to the letter from Cullman, which he turned over to St. Clair, replied to questions asked by Cullman. One of these was "what of the failure of the Bureau of Navigation to make 80 per cent of inspections and reinspections required by law?" To this Roper answered that the bureau has not failed during his tenure in office to make 80 per cent of such inspections, and that original inspections were made 100 per cent.

Mellon Art Gift Accepted By Senators

Approval Finally Voted After Arguments on Provisions.

Bill Goes Back to House for Conference on Amendments.

After five hours of oratory which embraced the artistic ability of Leonardo da Vinci and the merits of Florida and California citrus fruits, Senator Thomas Connally, of Texas, yesterday persuaded the Senate to accept Andrew Mellon's offer to establish a $65,000,000 National Gallery of Art here.

Senators La Follette, Norris, Borah, O'Mahoney and Black plagued Senator Connnally with amendments which the Texan declared would force the former Secretary of the Treasury to withdraw his offer.

Earlier the House, without debate, unanimously passed a bill accepting Mellon's offer to erect a $10,000,000 art gallery in the Mall, fill it with his collection of art treasures and establish a $5,000,000 trust fund to provide for future art acquisitions.

The Senate liberals objected to the provision of the bill which calls for Mellon's aproval of five of the art gallery's nine directors, who in turn shall appoint their own successors. Senator La Follette also expressed apprehension over the provision which gives the directors authority to reject paintings which they feel are inferior to the standard set by the masters whose works are represented in Mellon's collection.

Connally Tolerant.

Senator Connally was tolerant of the barrage of criticism but Senate Majority Leader Joseph Robinson rushed to his assistance, and shouted:

"This is a gift for the benefit of the American people. I want to see the Government get this gift and keep it. Either accept this gift under the conditions proposed by Mr. Mellon or reject it."

Roars of disapproval snowed under all of La Follette's amendments and the bill passed with only a few dissenting "noes."

The Senate measure will be sent to conference to iron out technical differences between it and the bill passed by the House.

Senator Connally reached his best oratorical form when he declared:

"Refuse this gift if you will! Say 'take back your pictures, Mr. Mellon; we don't want them.'

"Whether a man be educated or whether he be ignorant, whether he be cultured or whether he have only the elemental passions within him, when he wolks through a great gallery of art there are things that speak to him from the conception of the artists that do not need to be transcribed upon the written page.

"But Mr. Mellon says 'All I request is that this board of directors be set up as set forth in this bill and that then the board become self-perpetuating without political control, free from the pressure of this group or that group or the other group.'

Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida, expressed doubt whether the provision allowing the directors absolute control over future acquisitions was wise, and Senator Connally countered with the charge that the Floridian, if he staged an exhibition of Florida grapefruit, would not tolerate the exhibition of citrus fruits from other States.

Senator McAdoo then leaped into the debate with a defense of California grapefruit which, he contended, had all the artistic merit, if not more, than that of Florida grapefruit.

Civil Service Angle Debated.

Senator O'Mahoney then expressed fear that employes of the proposed National Gallery of Art would not come under the protection of the classified Civil Service. Connally pointed out that except for the officers of the gallery, all employes would be under the Civil Service, and added:

"Any Senator who wants to get a watchman or a charwoman a job in the National Gallery should tell his constituents to get on the Civil Service rolls."

Senator Connally taunted the Senate as he reminded it that only through private contribution could the United States hope to establish a National Gallery of Art.

"Suppose," the Texan said, "that we had before us a bill to appropriate $30,000,000 to buy an art collection comparable with that offered by Mr. Mellon. Every Senator who voted for that bill knows he would have candidates on every stump in

Nazi 'Terror' Hit by Lewis, Gen. Johnson

'Fear Is King in Reich,' Says C. I. O. Head at Jewish Rally.

Ex-NRA Chief Likens Hitler to the Kaiser; LaGuardia Talks.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 15.—John L. Lewis, in a speech prepared for delivery before thousands in a Madison Square Garden demonstration tonight against Nazism, said that Germany had "reverted to the Middle Ages," and its workers had been "degraded almost to serfdom."

The meeting, called by Jewish leaders, who said 273,000 had sought reservations in the hall that seats less than 10 per cent of that number, was the latest manifestation of the conflict here involving Adolf Hitler.

Mayor LaGuardia appeared unscheduled at the rally and said:

"Don't worry what Mr. Hitler may say. Pay no attention because the opinion of the world is that Adolf Hitler is not personally or diplomatically 'sobifacktion.'"

The mayor would not explain but persons on the platform of the meeting said it meant Hitler was not worth meeting on the field of honor.

"Similar to Kaiser."

He was greeted wildly by the audience.

Another of the principal speakers who was cheered to the echo was Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, who said that "Adolf Hitler and his immediate staff of 'Nazipathics' have become a sort of monster, threatening the peace of the world."

"There is no great difference," he went on, "between the totalitarian state of Hitler and the empire of the Kaiser, except the cut of the mustache of supreme authority."

Even as the gathering assembled, an international exchange between this country and the German government, precipitated by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia's reference to Hitler as a "brown-shirted fanatic," just had quieted.

The police of the city had been instructed to keep watch over synagogues because of a piece of vandalism in which 11 orange colored swastikas were smeared across a Jewish temple.

Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization, asserted the four-year record of the Nazi regime "reveals a program more thorough in its ghastly practices than any of us could have foreseen in 1933."

The German government, he added, had practiced a "deadly terror" against workers and against all minorities.

"Unionism," he said, "no longer exists in Germany. * * * Hundreds of union leaders have been murdered * * * because of their loyalty to the trust placed in them by German workers."

In this country, he went on, "if we can establish industrial democracy * * * we can insure the continuance of its political democracy."

There was but one method, he asserted, to "insure safety for the future—labor must become articulate."

"Fear King in Reich."

"* * * If we can organize the masses of American workers we can free them from industrial servitude. If we can free them from industrial servitude we can, in the fullest sense, free them from the political sackles which in the past have restrained and limited their strength."

Other principal speakers were Brig. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, the former NRA administrator, and Prof. Henry N. MacCracken, of Vassar College.

Amplifying apparatus was set up to carry the proceedings to the streets outside the Garden for those unable to get in. An official of the American Jewish Congress, which along with the Jewish labor committee arranged the meeting, said organizations numbering nearly 2,000,000 persons in New York City alone for weeks had been asking for reservations.

"Fear is king in Germany," he went on. "By day and by night each man's hand is against his brother. The days and the nights of the swastika terror have swept 100,000 men and women into concentration camps, where the torture of defenseless prisoners seems to be the choice pastime of the Nazi heroes."

The Jewish Congress announced "messages of sympathy" with the anti-Hitler demonstration had been received from 7 State Governors,

Chrysler Sit-Down Strikers Drop Vote on Defying Court; NLRB to Sue Remington Rand

Court Will Be Asked to Enforce Its Order to Reinstate 4,000.

Inquiry Is Started By Justice Bureau

Union Charges Company Took Strikebreakers Over State Lines.

Decision to seek immediately a court order for enforcement of the Labor Relations Board's order that Remington Rand, Inc., reinstate 4,000 strikers was reached here yesterday.

At the same time the Department of Justice began an investigation of union charges that the office equipment concern had transported strikebreakers across State lines in violation of the law.

Earlier in the day it was said at offices of the board here that the company would be given several days in which to comply with the sweeping ruling of the board, issued Sunday night. The stand was taken after William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, had urged the board to seek court enforcement.

Labor Plans Boycott.

Later, word from New York offices of Remington Rand, however, said the company's attorneys were taking steps at once "to protect the company's 12,000 factory workers from discharge" because of the board's ruling. Suit for an injunction was implied as the contemplated action. Green said he then was assured that the board would act immediately, probably filing a petition in the Circuit Court of Appeals at New York.

Green's request that a court order be sought was made to J. Warren Madden, chairman of the board. Following it, the labor chieftain said the federation would undertake a Nation-wide campaign "to prevent sales of Remington Rand products to the friends of labor."

He held the decision had "completely vindicated the strike and strike policies followed by the workers, and said the federation would call on city central bodies and State labor federations to endeavor to block purchases of the company's products by State and local governments.

These developments came while Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, was declaring, in an address before the American Industrial Development Council, that there is urgent need for formulation of a labor policy in the United States.

"This country has no labor policy," he declared. "Labor has not agreed upon one. Its organizations for the time being are split in fratricidal war. Industry has no policy. Part of it is for collective bargaining and outside organization. Part of it is playing with the fallacy of the company union. Part of it is living in the past and opposed to any form of labor solidarity whatever.

United States Labor Policy Urged.

"The Government has no labor policy. As matters now stand the decisions of the Supreme Court make the formulation of an effective national policy almost impossible. It is a sorry situation."

He criticized the "domineering methods" of employers as futile, and said the time is ripe for industry and labor to get together with assistance of the Government, "and work out some fair, sane and sensible program."

McGrady reviewed the industrial-labor conditions throughout the country, the number of strikes and the amount of time lost because of them, 13,800,000 man-days in 1936, he said, and the causes of the disputes. To the national boasts that America has the "smartest business men" and, in its workers, "the greatest producers" in the world, he said should be added the admission that "we have the world's poorest method of settling our labor disputes."

He described activities of various bureaus of the Labor Department, saying that the Conciliation Service, for instance, had aided directly and indirectly more than 17,403,595 workers who appealed to it for aid. Then he emphasized that the department has no power "to compel anyone to do anything" and recalled that when Secretary Perkins recently asked Congress to give her department the power of subpena, "there wasn't a voice raised either by labor or industry in favor of it."

The Remington Rand case will be discussed at a conference Thursday between Secretary Perkins and James H. Rand, jr., president of the company.

Department of Justice officials told the Associated Press yesterday they had assigned agents to investigate union charges that the company had moved strike-breakers from New York City to one of its plants at Middletown, Conn.

Federal Naval Prison Labeled School of Vice by Sen. Bridges

Dope-Peddling, Gambling, Degeneracy Flourish in Portsmouth, N.H., Lock-up, He Says; Calls Welfare Island Scandal 'Pink Tea' in Comparison.

By Windsor Booth.

Charges of dope peddling, organized and open gambling, and perversion were leveled at the Portsmouth, N. H., Naval Prison, by Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican, N. H.,) here yesterday. At the same time Senator Bridges announced he will demand a thorough investigation not only to clean up the prison but to learn if high officials of the prison are guilty of connivance or neglect.

"When the facts are fully known," Senator Bridges said, "and I propose that they shall be known, no matter who may be involved, the country will be amazed that such gross irregularities can exist in a Federal prison. Information that is already coming to light constitutes a national scandal. If data that I have gathered are correct, and I have every reason to believe they are correct, the New York Welfare Island prison scandal will seem like a pink tea."

Many of the prison employes are in a state of terror, Senator Bridges declared. They are fully aware of the deplorable conditions that exist, but they have been threatened with demotion or dimissal from the Navy if they "snitch." Despite threats, a number of employes have furnished facts on the actual state of affairs, and Bridges has promised them he will fight vigorously any attempted reprisals.

"Only recently," Senator Bridges said 'a delegation of men from the prison came to Washington to see me. They were terrified. They didn't dare come to my office, fearful that some one would see them and report back I was forced to confer

Judge Orders 5,000 to Quit Motor Plants by 9 A. M. Tomorrow.

$10,000,000 Penalty Fixed for Refusal

Jurist Finds Respect for Law Menaced; C. I. O. Opens Electric Parley.

By the Associated Press.

"Sit-down" strike strategy suffered a major setback yesterday in a court order directing 5,000 men to leave the Chrysler Motor Corporation's property.

The squatters, encamped in eight Detroit plants, abandoned a plan to vote on whether they would leave by 9 a. m. tomorrow—the time limit set by Circuit Judge Allan Campbell. The judge, contending "respect for law and order and the courts is menaced," issued an injunction providing a penalty of $10,000,000 for non-compliance, and naming, among others, John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

While 130,000 persons were out of employment in some 80 strikes, C. I. O. spokesmen sat at the conference tables of three huge corporations.

Representatives of the United Homer Martin, union president, who flew here from the national executive committee's meeting in Cleveland, made the announcement at a U. A. W. A. rally.

"We did not put the men in the plants and we are not going to take them out," Martin told the meeting. "We are not going to vote on that question."

It had been said earlier that the strikers themselves would vote tonight whether they would comply with the injunction.

Electrical and Radio Workers Union, aiming at the organization of 1,000,000 in the electrical manufacturing and communications lines, discussed collective bargaining with the General Electric Co., employer of 60,000 and largest in its field.

Philip Murray, spearhead of the Lewis drive in the steel industry, laid demands for completion of its recent bargaining contract before the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation at Pittsburgh. United Automobile Workers negotiators, striving for exclusive bargaining rights, resumed a parley with Chrysler officials.

Murphy Acts for Peace.

Gov. Frank Murphy, declaring "there should be no defiance of public authority," initiated a move toward peace in Michigan's labor centers at a session with prosecuting attorneys and National Guard representatives. He has called leaders of industry, labor, business, civic organizations and the clergy to a Wednesday meeting in Detroit to draft a program designed to checkmate industrial strife.

Meanwhile, Statler Hotel employes in Detroit quit work; a city-wide strike of truck drivers curtailed tansportation of all but perishable goods; and the motor car industry counted more than 90,000 idle—including 60,000 at the Chrysler Corporation, 10,000 at the Hudson Motor Car Co., 17,000 at the Briggs Body Works and 2,200 on the Reo Motor Co. payroll.

Brooklyn police broke in the barricaded kitchen of the Jewish Hospital and arrested 18 "sit-down" demonstrators, ten of them women. The detail then turned its attention to 90 others who had locked themselves in the laundry and ice houses.

The struggle ended in a truce when strikers agreed to return to work pending arbitration.

Sitters held four five and ten stores in New York's metropolitan area for the fourth day. Unionists who called a walkout in 23 Brooklyn laundries said about 1,000 had left their jobs.

Bricks and stones continued to fly in the strike and brought about the arrest of 23 men, all reported by Chicago police to be striking drivers.

200 Women Strike.

Some 200 women sat down at the I. Lewis Cigar Manufacturing Co., in Newark, N. J. About 70 pickets prevented the opening of a department store in East St. Louis, Ill.

At Pittsburgh, United Electrical and Radio Union leaders dickered with the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. on pay raises, and 107 blind workers promised "bloodshed will result" if they were ousted from a broom factory.

John J. McBride, president of the Brotherhood of Teamsters and Chauffeurs, ordered 500 Philadelphia

Ban on Parking Nears as Snow Delays Traffic

Cherry Blossoms Spared as 6 Inches Fall; Today to Be Clear.

The heavy March snowfall, which, by 10 o'clock last night had carpeted the District to a depth of more than 6 inches, ended before last midnight.

Clear skies and a rising temperature will bring a thaw today, the forecaster added. Yesterday highest reading was 35 degrees at 1 p. m., while the low occurred at 7 a. m., when the mercury stood at 29.

Traffic moved cautiously, but regularly, throughout Washington and its suburbs yesterday, and the Capital Transit Co. had 500 men busy keeping bus routes and car tracks open.

Snowbound Cars Tagged.

No effort was being made to enforce snow removal parking regulations, declared invalid when there was no snow, but snowbound automobiles parked inextricably in zones where parking is forbidden from 8 a. m. to 9:30 a. m. were ticketed yesterday morning.

The District, however, still contends the snow ordinance is legal, and will so argue before the District Court of Appeals. If this appeal loses, a 24-hour-a-day ban for arterial highways will be proposed in its place.

Thus far the Japanese cherry blossoms in Potomac Park have escaped damage, Frank T. Garside, assistant superintendent of National Capital Parks, said last night, after an inspection of the trees.

Snow Sweeps Virginia.

There has not been such a heavy snowfall this late in the season since 1924, when the opening day racing program in April at the Bowie track was called off due to a snowstorm.

Failure of heating plants yesterday forced the closing of the Gonzaga High School, St. Aloysius Elementary School and Notre Dame School for Girls.

Rain, sleet and snow, accompanied by temperatures hovering around the freezing mark, swept Virginia from Bristol, on the southwestern border, to the Tidewater section, 500 miles to the east, yesterday.

Ice and snow glazed tortuous mountain roads in the west. East from Bristol driving was extremely hazardous. Roanoke had 3 inches of

10,000 Beat Deadline Here Despite Last-Minute Bad Weather.

Nearly 10,000 Washingtonians beat yesterday's deadline on income tax payments and officials of the Bureau of Internal Revenue here estimated returns 30 per cent over last year.

Thousands filed through the office of the deputy collector for Washington in the Internal Revenue Building here yesterday. By 5 p. m. an estimated 4,100 had made out belated returns. The after-dinner rush, it was said, would more than double this number.

Numerous telephoned requests for time extensions because of the inclement weather were turned down by officials, who pointed out taxpayers already had had 75 days in which to file returns.

Last person to rush up to the cashier's window in the Revenue Building last night to pay his income tax was Eugene H. Lorenz, lawyer and certified public accountant.

"I've made out 50 or 60 returns for other people," said Lorenz, "and had to wait until the last minute to file my own."

Collector of Internal Revenue M. Hampton Magruder, the Associated Press reported, estimated approximately 250,000 returns will be made for the district, which includes Washington. This figure, he said, is 50,000 more than the number of returns filed last year.

Despite the last-minute rush the crowds were kept moving evenly and there were no corridor-long queues as had filled the aisles Saturday.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau meanwhile made it known that he expects March income tax throughout the Nation to total about $840,000,000. From these collections the Secretary intends to retire $300,000,000 of maturing discount bills and pay about $160,000,000 on the public debt. Since new bills are being issued to replace those to be retired, the Treasury will have about $680,000,000 additional money this month for general spending purpose. Thus, if predictions prove correct, tax income may balance with expenditures for the rest of the fiscal year ending June 30.

Besides the income-tax receipts, collections under the taxing pro-

Safety Patrol Overhauls Pair; One Gets Ticket for Speeding

By Howard F. Wentworth.

(Winner of first prize in the Nation-wide C. I. T. Safety Contest with his 1936 series appearing in The Post.)

Careening at high speed through snow and slush along upper Wisconsin avenue, a District motorist yesterday defied safe driving regulations for more than a mile of hazardous highway before receiving a summons to explain his apparent negligence in Traffic Court.

First in a series of traffic danger episodes encountered by the new safety patrol—Policeman George M. Patton, accompanied by this reporter—as daily cruises in search of open law infractions started, the folly of this example was heightened by adverse weather conditions and heavy, slow-moving traffic.

Starting from Police Headquarters at 11 a. m., the safety patrol toured downtown streets while Policeman Patton observed conditions and attempted to regulate congested traffic centers. Numerous motorists who failed to comply strictly with safety regulations were warned and instructed in the law.

It was mid-afternoon before the patrol reached Wisconsin avenue. At Ordway street, a taxi ignored a stop sign and edged its way into the lane of through traffic. While Patton questioned the driver, the speeding motorist, who was to lead a breakneck chase toward the District line, passed the intersection.

The "safety officer" started in pursuit. The car ahead weaved in and out among other vehicles and was soon well in advance. Hindered by blinding snow, the safety patrol had difficulty in keeping the speeding [illegible] in view.

At one point, the patrol car's speedometer registered 45 miles an hour, the fleeing car continued to [illegible] distance.

As traffic grew heavier and driv-

Edward, Future Bride to Meet, Plan Buying Maryland Home

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 15.—A conference somewhere in France between the Duke of Windsor, Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson and Sumner D. Parker, of Baltimore, at which the former King of England and Mrs. Simpson may consider purchase of an American home, tonight appeared a possibility of the near future.

Parker, landing from a transatlantic liner at Cherbourg today, asserted he was negotiating with the duke for sale of an estate at Brooklandville, Md., and indicated the transaction was near completion.

Parker and his wife left Cherbourg by automobile for Paris and tonight were stopping somewhere in the provinces, but friends expected them to arrive here tomorrow for a three-week stay to continue the negotiations.

From Vienna came reports the Duke of Windsor is planning to come to France next week for a brief meeting with the woman he intends to marry. While Mrs. Simpson, at Monts, near Tours, denied through a spokesman any knowledge of such a plan, Paris sources believed they soon would give serious consideration to the question of their future home, since Mrs. Simpson's divorce may become absolute April 27 and the duke has indicated he wishes to be married soon thereafter.

Persons close to Parker were unable to say whether possible discussions of the sale of a Maryland home to the duke would be held at

President Speeds Income Tax Check North by Airplane

Warm Springs, Ga., March 15 (AP). President Roosevelt heaved a sigh of relief with untold numbers of fellow citizens today as his income tax sped northward by plane to beat a midnight deadline.

Electing to make out his own return this year without the aid of a White House tax expert, the President worked over the annual headache producer for several hours yesterday before a logwood fire in his Pine Mountain vacation cottage.

With his check for the full amount of the undisclosed levy inside a White House envelope, the return was sent to Atlanta with the daily Presidential mail in the charge of a special postal inspector.

There, it was transferred to an Army plane for the north. Although he calls Hyde Park, N. Y., his permanent home, his temporary residence at "1600 Pennsylvania avenue" requires him to make his tax payable to the Internal Revenue collector at Baltimore.

5 Die As Storms Sweep France

Paris, March 15 (AP).—France counted five deaths tonight in the first of spring storms.

Most of the dikes in five villages on Noirmoutier Island were smashed and crops were destroyed. The Rhone, Saone and Loire rivers rose, and suburbs of Avignon were flooded. A tidal wave caused heavy damage at Rochefort-Sur-Mer, on the Bay of Biscay.

Stricken by Flu, Mother of Carol Is Holding Own

Bucharest, Rumania, March 15 (AP).—Marie, Dowager Queen of Rumania and "Queen Mother to the Balkans," was reported holding her own today after being suddenly stricken with a serious illness that developed into a partial paralysis.

The 61-year-old queen dowager, whose children through their marriage had partially linked the Balkan states in a family alliance, became ill Thursday night at the opera which she has attended frequently this season. Her illness was described by a member of the royal household as an attack of influenza complicated by an intestinal inflammation.

Judiciary Unit In Senate Aids An Amendment

Members Claim Sufficient Votes to Counter Court Plan of President.

By Robert C. Albright.

Opponents of the President's judiciary program last night claimed voting power in the Senate Judiciary Committee to approve a Constitutional amendment meeting the court issue.

Simultaneously, Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson indicated sympathy for the amendment method, but only as a "corollary" to the President's plan, and not as a substitute. He predicted passage of the court bill this session.

Support for a Constitutional amendment as a substitute for the President's plan was sought by the opposition, as proponents of court enlargement called President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, to appear before the Judiciary Committee today.

Green Favors Bill.

Green, first witness for labor, favors the court bill. Justin Miller, president of the Federal Bar Association, and former special Assistant to Attorney General Cummings, will follow Green before the committee in support of the bill.

Senate court plan opponents are almost evenly divided in support of Constitutional amendments drawn by Senators Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, and Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming.

The Wheeler proposal would give Congress power to over-ride court invalidating opinions by a two-thirds vote, after a Congressional election. The O'Mahoney amendment would require a two-thirds majority of the Supreme Court before an act of Congress could be invalidated.

A judiciary sub-committee, headed by O'Mahoney, was appointed yesterday by Chairman Henry F. Ashurst to consider the Wyoming Senator's amendment. It was reliably learned that an attempt will be made by the opposition to get a committee vote on either or both the O'Mahoney and Wheeler proposals before the court bill goes to a committee showdown.

Expects Bill to Pass.

Senator Robinson, who favored the amendment method before Congress convened but swung immediately to support the President's plan, told reporters yesterday:

"I expect the plan of the President will be approved by the Congress. It is by no means certain that a constitutional amendment will not also be considered by Congress for submission to the States, as a corollary to the President's plan to increase the court membership. Certain amendments would undoubtedly be received by the people with favor."

Robinson added that constitutional amendment proposals "do not have direct relationships to an increase in the Supreme Court membership," but he saw no inconsistency between the President's court bill and certain amendments.

The majority leaders said support for the President's plan is gaining ground steadily.

Norris Offers Plan.

As O'Mahoney and Wheeler sought support for their alternative proposals, Senator George W. Norris (Independent), Nebraska, coupled the amendment idea with a proposed legislative remedy, and proposed this dual attack on the problem.

Norris, who initially saw "anger" in the President's plan, but indicated he would vote for it if no other solution is found, offered a constitutional amendment limiting the terms of Federal judges, including members of the Supreme Court, to nine years instead of life tenure. At the same time he proposed legislation requiring a court majority of at least 7 to 2 to invalidate an act of Congress.

The latter proposal is similar to the plan advanced by Senator O'Mahoney, with this important difference: Norris believes the majority of the court can be fixed by legislation. O'Mahoney thinks it would require a constitutional amendment.

Although opponents of the President's program lacked common agreement on what type of Constitutional amendment should be submitted, they were as one in declaring whatever court reform is attempted should be submitted to the people via the amendment route.

Senator Wheeler insisted the opposition would have little trouble in agreeing on the amendment form. He said with the President's backing, a Constitutional amendment could be ratified by State conventions "in less time than will be used in debating this bill of his."

While claiming sufficient votes in the Judiciary Committee to report out either the O'Mahoney or Wheeler amendment, or both, leaders of the opposition may not get an early opportunity to attempt this strategy. Judiciary Committee meetings for the balance of the week will be confined to hearings. Ashurst called no meeting of the committee yesterday.

Other developments yesterday:

Senator Homer T. Bone (Democrat), of Washington, who collaborated with Wheeler on his constitutional amendment, said yesterday he favored a change in it. Bone would submit directly to the people any act of Congress invalidated by the court, at the next succeeding Congressional election.

The Senate debated for half an hour yesterday what to do with the landslide of petitions, memorials and speeches on the court plan being sent to the Senate. At Robinson's suggestion, resolutions from State Legislatures and speeches by "outstanding individuals" will be printed in the Congressional Record, and the remaining material turned over to the Judiciary Committee.

House Holds Brief Forum.

The House held another brisk but brief court forum. Representative William I. Sirovich, (Democrat), New York, argued court plan proponents are battling for "human rights." Representative Noah M. Mason (Republican), of Illinois, retorted that a constitutional amendment offered "the proper method of serving human rights."

Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah a court plan opponent, said he personally would investigate "reports" that supporters of the President's plan are receiving more radio time than opponents. Columbia Broadcasting Co. officials in New York said their system has divided time equally, with 17 speeches to date for the plan, and 17 against.

Senator Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, declared the "majority" of the mail he is receiving in support of the court program "is of the chain letter type." He said out of 17,000 letters he has received, only 18 per cent is for the plan. The initial reaction showed only 10 per cent for, he said.

Claims Strong Opposition.

Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), Nebraska, claimed there is a "minimum" of 40 votes in the Senate against any enlargement of the court whatsoever, and another 12 that would vote against a full six-judge enlargement.

Senator Carl A. Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, was considering an amendment to the court plan spreading the enlargement over a period of years, by permitting no one President to name more than one or two additional judges.

It was learned last night Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, in his full radio address on March 29, may reply to the arguments used for the plan during opening testimony by Attorney General Cummings and Assistant Attorney General Jackson. Senator Wheeler, in his Chicago speech last Wednesday, undertook to answer the President.

President Green, of the American Federation of Labor, who will testify for the court program at Judiciary Committee hearings opening at 10:30 this morning, announced his advocacy of the plan following a recent meeting of his executive council.

President John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, Green's bitter labor rival, has not yet been scheduled to testify. Lewis has been crusading for the program through various affiliated organizations, and is expected to be called before hearings are concluded.

Chairman Ashurst has invited Edward F. Corwin, professor of constitutional law at Princeton, and Leon Breen, dean of the Northwestern University law school, to testify for the program tomorrow. The balance of the week will be assigned to statement of the Administration's case, and next Monday Senator Wheeler will open testimony for the opposition.

Senator Norris' proposal yesterday of a dual attack on the court problem through legislation and a constitutional amendment followed a speech in the Senate last week advocating both amendment and legislative remedies.

Politics and People

President Unfair in Quoting Justice Hughes; Used Phrase Instead of Whole Sentence.

By Franklyn Waltman

IF Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes listened to President Roosevelt's fireside chat last week he must have winced when he heard himself quoted as asserting that "we are under a Constitution but the Constitution is what the judges say it is."

WALTMAN.

He would have winced, if he had heard that speech, because the words attributed to him were used by the President in such a way as to disparage the high tribunal over which the Chief Justice presides. Indeed, the context in which Mr. Roosevelt used the quotation was susceptible to the impression that Chief Justice Hughes had uttered those words while a member of the Supreme Court and perhaps in a dissenting opinion in criticism of a majority of the Court.

And Mr. Hughes' pain would have been the greater because his high office by custom lays on him restrictions which prevent him from calling attention to a misrepresentation of his views through the old device of tearing a phrase from its context and the circumstances under which it was uttered and permitting it to stand naked to mean something other than that which it was intended at the time.

The President's use of this phrase was unfair because if Mr. Roosevelt had quoted the complete sentence in which it appears he would have been denouncing the very thing which he was doing. But there is no reason to believe that Mr. Roosevelt deliberately misrepresented the Chief Justice because that quotation has been current now for several years. The President, when asked at his press conference last Wednesday, the occasion on which Mr. Hughes made that statement, did not know, but said he would have the matter looked up.

The phrase "we are under a Constitution but the Constitution is what the judges say it is" gained widespread currency two years ago when Prof. Edward S. Corwin, of Princeton University, blazoned it on the fly-leaf of his book: "The Twilight of the Supreme Court." The quotation intrigued Tully Nettleton, of the editorial staff of the Christian Science Monitor, and he set out to track the quotation to its lair.

Mr. Nettleton found that the phrase was uttered in a speech delivered May 7, 1907, by Mr. Hughes, then Governor of New York and before he had been named for the first time to the Supreme Court. The remark was made in connection with Mr. Hughes' fight for a public service commission law.

Gov. Hughes was one of the speakers invited to address a meeting at Elmira, N. Y., under the auspices of that city's Chamber of Commerce. Speaking before the Governor was John B. Stanchfield, a well-known attorney, who attacked the public utilities legislation. One criticism he raised against it was that it prevented appeals to the courts from the State commission's rulings.

Defending his legislative child against the Stanchfield attack, Gov. Hughes addressed himself to the argument about appeals to the courts, Mr. Nettleton found and continued thusly:

"I have the highest regard for the courts. My whole life has been spent in work conditioned upon respect for the courts. I reckon him one of the worst enemies of the community who will talk lightly of the dignity of the bench. We are under a Constitution, but the Constitution is what the judges say it is, and the judiciary is the safeguard of our liberty and of our property under the Constitution. I do not want to see any direct assault upon the courts, nor do I want to see any indirect assault upon the courts.

"And I tell you, ladies and gentlemen, no more insidious assault could be made upon the independence and esteem of the judiciary than to burden it with these questions of administration—questions which lie close to the public impatience, and in regard to which the people are going to insist on having administration by officers directly accountable to them.

"Let us keep the courts for questions they were intended to consider. When questions of property rights are involved—the constitutional right to hold property and not be deprived of it without due process of law is involved; when under the guise of regulation or authority to supervise railroad management, there is an assumption of arbitrary power not related to the public convenience; when there is a real judicial question—let the courts have it and every good citizen will stand aside and hope to see it decided fairly and with even-handed justice."

Quotation of the paragraphs surrounding the phrase that "we are under a Constitution but the Constitution is what the judges say it is" demonstrates that instead of Mr. Hughes using those words to disparage the courts—he was not talking specifically about the Supreme Court at all—he used them to defend and uphold the "judiciary" as "the safeguard of our liberty and of our property under the Constitution."

There is no effort here to indicate that Mr. Roosevelt knew the Hughes phrase which he quoted had been lifted out of its content to give it a meaning not intended for it. The evidence indicates that he used the phrase without bothering to check its source or to see whether it was representative of Mr. Hughes' speech. The incident, however, demonstrates the danger of seizing on phrases which are bandied about without making such a check.

There has been some amazement over the feeble cross-examination of Attorney General Homer S. Cummings when he appeared before the Senate Judiciary Committee in behalf of the President's Supreme Court proposal. Some have contended that the Cummings presentation was invulnerable—which is quite fanciful. Others have feared the Senate opponents of the proposal were resigned to letting the fight go by default. The real reason is that no Senators wished to antagonize the Attorney General, who has the final word in passing on candidates to be United States district attorneys and marshals, as well as judges — Presidential patronage really is in such a fight.

Cases Bearing On Wagner Act Refused Review

Action Renews Discussion of Supreme Court Views on Labor Law.

By the Associated Press.

The Supreme Court, by refusing yesterday to review eight new cases involving the Wagner labor relations act, caused a new flurry of discussion about the tribunal's views on the legislation.

The tribunal's refusal temporarily left in effect lower court rulings for the Government in each of the eight cases. Supreme Court attaches pointed out, however, that the action could not be interpreted as reflecting the attitude of the justices toward the Wagner measure.

It was said the court's opinion on five pending cases, which may be decided two weeks hence, may decide all the points at issue in the new disputes. It would thus be unnecessary to review.

Adjourns Till March 29.

After a brief session to read one opinion and announce orders, the court adjourned until March 29. During the next fortnight the justices will be free to devote their time to completing opinions on the Wagner act cases, on litigation involving the Washington law establishing minimum wages for women and on other controversies.

In the opinion yesterday the court decided an employe of a municipal water works system does not have to pay a Federal income tax on his salary. The litigation was brought by William Whitlock Brush, former chief engineer of the New York City Bureau of Water Supply, but the United States Conference of Mayors estimated the decision may affect 200,000 city employes throughout the country.

Justice Sutherland delivered the 7-to-2 opinion. Justice Roberts, joined by Justice Brandeis, read a dissenting opinion contending that "the claimed exemption may well extend to millions of persons" employed by municipal sub-divisions and to "hundreds of thousands" of similar employes of Federal agencies.

No Treasury Comment.

The Treasury made no official comment pending a study of the opinion, but indicated unofficially that it would not necessitate many tax refunds.

The majority opinion of the Supreme Court said "the acquisition and distribution of a supply of water for the needs of the modern city involves the exercise of essential governmental functions." It added that without an adequate water supply "the city itself would disappear."

The opinion reversed decisions in 1929 and 1934 that the Federal Government could tax the salaries of officials of the Des Moines, Iowa, water warks system.

Oley Money Stays In Denver Banks

Denver, March 15 (AP).—District Judge Robert W. Steele declined today to release the bank account of Francis Leo Oley, charged in New York with the kidnaping of John J. O'Connell, jr., son of a politically powerful New York family.

The money, $11,300, was impounded in two Denver banks shortly after Oley and his wife, Mrs. Genevieve Ryan Oley, were arrested here in connection with the kidnap case. The suit alleges that it is part of the kidnap ransom paid by O'Connell's father.

Hebrew Congregation Plans Dinner Tomorrow

The second monthly dinner of the Brotherhood of the Washington Hebrew Congregation will be held tomorrow night at 7 o'clock in the vestry rooms of the temple on Eighth street. The speaker will be Lieut. James R. Kirkland, United States Naval Reserve, and former assistant United States attorney for the District. Lieut. Kirkland was on the destroyer Kane when it was bombed by a Spanish plane.

A one-act skit, "A Marriage Has Been Arranged," will be put on by Yvonne Kushner and Milton Norman. Rabbi Abram Simon will talk on current Jewish topics.

visions of the Social Security Act will do much to swell the Federal coffers.

Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill, leaders awaited Treasury findings on national revenue returns before moving to plug suspected loopholes in the undistributed surplus profits tax. Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, has three tax proposals now pending. These include a recommendation for a conference of Government and State officials to outline uniform inheritance-tax schedules; a bill abolishing the capital gains and losses tax where capital assets are held longer than a year, and a measure to modify substantially the undistributed profits tax contained in the law passed last session.

In this last connection, King would allow corporations credit for all amounts paid on indebtedness incurred before May 1, 1936, and a further credit against their tax of an amount equal to sums paid out for the construction or improvement of real property.

Army to Build Large Air Base In Northwest

To Spend $5,000,000 on Defense Program at Tacoma, Wash.

By the United Press.

The War Department yesterday revealed plans to establish an Army air base at Tacoma, Wash., the first of a series of such bases to be constructed under authority of the Wilcox act of 1935. Expenditure of $5,000,000 over a period of years is contemplated at the new air base.

The Army high command is considered in military circles to be seeking to strengthen what in Army circles long has been considered national defense weakness—lack of adequate aerial defense in the Pacific Northwest against possible attack from the Aleutian Islands, Alaska and the Puget Sound. The so-called first line of national defense is drawn from Alaska via Hawaii to the Canal Zone.

The new air base, which probably will be assigned units of the first wing of the G. H. Q. Air Force, is expected to serve as a "stepping off" base for possible future operations in Alaska and for aerial defense of the North Pacific and the Alaskan coasts.

Adjacent to Fort Lewis.

Eventually it is estimated that the Tacoma base, to be known officially as the "Northwest Air Base," will accommodate about 200 officers and 1,100 or 1,200 enlisted men. Repair shops will be constructed and supplies of ammunition and other air force equipment will be accumulated.

The base will be adjacent to Fort Lewis, where the Third Division and other ground troops are stationed.

Tacoma was selected on recommendation of a board of officers appointed by the Secretary of War to survery Army requirements for air bases and other plants contemplated under the Wilcox act.

The area selected comprises the Pierce County Airport, covering 960 acres, which has been donated to the Government by Pierce County for use as an Army air base. Purchase of an additional 350 acres at a cost of $60,0000 between the present airport and the boundary of Fort Lewis is contemplated.

May Have 1,000 Planes.

The War Department is asking for an additional $625,000 with which to begin necessary buildings, additions and improvements. Eventually it is anticipated the base will be adequate to accommodate the entire fighting fleet of the General Headquarters Air Force.

National defense plans worked out by the Army high command provide for possible concentration of the entire 1,000 fighting planes of the General Headquarters Air Force in the Northwest area, for possible service far over the Pacific in event an enemy should attempt to invade the Puget Sound area.

In this last connection, King would allow corporations credit for all amounts paid on indebtedness incurred before May 1, 1936, and a further credit against their tax of an amount equal to sums paid out for the construction or improvement of real property.

Wm. Beckmann (As he is today)

This is the condition of my scalp on Nov. 20th, 1936, after 3 weeks of Thomas treatment. Wm. Beckmann

THE above photographs show how Thomas treatment re-grows hair even in extremely serious* cases of complete baldness. Within five weeks after Mr. Beckmann was accepted for treatment in a Thomas office, new hair was visible on his scalp.

Perhaps the condition which is causing your loss of hair may not be as serious as was Mr. Beckmann's. Regardless as to what the cause may be, it will surely lead you to baldness unless you promptly take proper steps to overcome it. Dandruff, for example, is the most common and most deadly enemy of hair health. Thomas treatment effectively overcomes dandruff, stops falling hair, itching scalp and promotes hair growth on thin and bald spots. In fact, The Thomas' successfully treat all of the 14 local scalp disorders which are responsible for 90% of all baldness.

Come in today and have a talk with a Thomas expert. No charge is made for a complete scalp examination nor for consultation. (Scalp examination, consultation, and treatment are always in private.)

The Emperor didn't have to go to the office in the morning

If you have a job like his, maybe you can live as he did . . . but most modern men watch their food . . . and choose a whiskey designed for modern living

Self-control wasn't the Emperor's hobby. He absorbed food and drink in a big, sweeping way . . . as was the custom in those days.

THE EMPEROR was all for the good old Roman discipline . . . for everybody but the Emperor. So he ploughed into the rich viands with carefree abandon, and poured stout, heavy drinks down the Imperial throat in vast quantities. If he was under the weather the next day, he could cancel that 9:30 appointment at the Senate-house, or send one of the boys to represent him.

Modern man can't gorge and guzzle in the Emperor's lavish manner . . . and even if he could, he wouldn't want to. He takes thought of the morrow, selects what he eats, thinks before he drinks. For he is keenly aware that today's high-pressure life calls for moderation . . . that he must drink light, feel right.

This highly discriminating attitude assured IRISH AMERICAN a warm welcome when it was first introduced . . . and is bringing it fast-increasing popularity everywhere. For this fine, light whiskey was especially developed for modern tastes, especially created to fit into modern life.

IRISH AMERICAN combines the rich savor of robust pot still whiskey and the fine flavor of a specially distilled straight American whiskey. The result is a superb liquor with a distinctive flavor . . . and exceptional mildness and lightness.

Excellent as a straight drink . . . IRISH AMERICAN also makes a perfect foundation for a delicious Manhattan, Old-Fashioned or highball. Its price is surprisingly moderate . . . It's best to ask for it by name—IRISH AMERICAN Brand.

Senate Accepts $65,000,000 Art Gift of Mellon

Approval Finally Is Voted After Arguments Over Provisions.

his States campaigning against him. We know those candidates would say the Senator voted to spend $30,000,000 of your hard-earned taxes to buy the works of a foreigner named Leonardo da Cinci."

Senator Connally challenged his colleagues to either accept Mellon's offer under the terms outlined in the bill or vote flatly to reject it. He added:

"To my mind it is only a question of whether we will take this bill or leave it. The Government is no pauper. We could build our own gallery and the Government could run it. Then if a constituent paints a picture and brings it to us we can put it in the gallery.

"We'll run the gallery like the people want it run," Connally declared, pounding his chest and joining in the general laughter.

Senator La Follette's defeated amendments would have entrusted appointment of general trustees of the proposed art gallery to the President rather than to trustees of the Smithsonian Institution and Mellon, and relaxed stern provisions governing the merit of works admitted to the institution.

Senator Black said the self-perpetuating board of trustees would forever be beyond the control of Congress. Senator Norris joined the opposition, declaring:

"I do not question Mr. Mellon's right to attach conditions, but as a free citizen I still can refuse to accept those conditions without casting reflections on Mr. Mellon."

Senator Borah declared that while he was deeply appreciative of Mellon's generous gift, he was reluctant to approve a bill setting up a body which would perpetuate itself forever beyond governmental control unless the Congress "acting in bad faith" should repeal the bill of acceptance.

"I do not believe Mr. Mellon would object to Congress reserving the right to modify this bill if the necessity ever arose," said Senator Borah, but Senators Robinson and Connally hastened to assure him that there was objection. Senator Connally said Mellon's representatives believed the self-perpetuating board of trustees was one of the most important provisions in the bill.

Senator La Follette said he feared that the trustees approved by Mellon would not consider American works of art worthy of going into the Mellon collection.

Senator La Follette then announced that he wanted to discuss Mellon's offer in "relation to tax matters now pending." The former Secretary of the Treasury is currently opposing a $3,000,000 Government tax claim involving his art collection.

Senator Connally was on his feet in a second to ask:

"What does this bill have to do with tax questions? Does the Senator want to kick Mr. Mellon around?"

"No," responded La Follette, "and I don't think my conduct here gives any such impression."

The Senate accepted an amendment by Senator Borah stipulating that the collection of the proposed National Gallery should be exhibited without admission charges. Senator Connally accepted the amendment, declaring he felt sure it was in accord with Mellon's wishes.

Under terms of the bills approved by the House and Senate, the Government is empowered to accept three gifts from the A. W. Mellon Educational and Charitable Trust. The first of these gifts will be the gallery building. It will be designed by Architect John Russell Pope and erected in the Mall in the area bounded by Seventh street, Constitution avenue, Fourth street, and the North Mall drive. In addition, the adjoining area bounded by Fourth street, Pennsylvania avenue, Third street and the North Mall drive will be reserved as a site for future additions to the gallery building. Sixth street will be closed by the gallery development.

The second of the gifts is a collection totaling about 100 paintings and 20 sculptures by great masters. The original cost of the collection was about $35,000,000 and its present value is estimated at $50,000,000. Among the masters whose works are represented in the collection are Reynolds, Botticello, Raphael, Rubens, Rembrandt, Gainsborough, Titian, Hobemma, Frans Hals, Van Dyke, Verrocchio, Holbein, Turner, Constable, Raeburn, Velasquez, Durer, and others. In addition, Mellon is contributing 190 American paintings from the Clark and other collections. Included are portraits by Gilbert Stuart, Savage, Trumbull, Benjamin West, Sully, and other Americans.

The final gift proposed is an endowment fund of $5,000,000. It is intended that the trust funds will be used for paying the salaries of the gallery's directors, assistant director, secretary and chief curator and the acquisition of other works of art. Title to the gallery and the collections will be vested in the Smithsonian Institution.

It is estimated that it will cost the Federal Government $300,000 annually to maintain the gallery.

Four of the nine trustees of the gallery will be ex-officio members. They will be the Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, the Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution. The five general trustees will be selected by the boards of regents of the Smithsonian Institution with the approval of Mellon.

Safety Officer Writes Out Ticket

Policeman George M. Patton, the city's new "Safety Officer," tickets a motorist for driving too fast.

ing conditions hazardous, Patton said:

"Let him go—we can get him later. He may want to risk his neck, but we are endangering our own lives as well as those of other motorists."

The patrol car slackened speed. At the same time, the car ahead was seen to stop for a red signal light at Albemarle street. Again the case was taken up. And this time the driver was overtaken—less than a block from the District Line.

Denied High Speed.

"I wasn't traveling over 30 miles an hour," said the accused violator, who gave his occupation as a street car motorman.

"Don't you realize that even 30 miles an hour is a dangerous speed in weather like this?" asked Patton.

The driver didn't answer.

A moment later, however, he again attempted to justify his driving by insisting the policeman was wrong in his estimation of the speed.

"Meet me in court Friday," said Patton, handing the driver a "ticket."

Some time later, on Rhode Island avenue northeast, the patrol car fell in behind another car traveling at high speed. When this driver was stopped, he, too, denied the officer's charges.

In this instance, the motorist was attempting to clear the road in front of him by constantly blowing an air horn. When questioned about this, he said:

"The man ahead of me was going too slow. I had an appointment to keep and I was in a little hurry."

Unable to Control Car.

This driver admitted he would have been unable to control his car on the slippery street in case of an emergency. He said he realized the city was in the midst of a safety drive, but "didn't think 30 miles an hour was too fast."

Throughout the day, as the safety patrol cruised streets in all sections of the city, it was noticed that many motorists, driving with windows of heir cars closed, failed to give adequate warning signals when turning and stopping.

This failure, it was noted, presented numerous hazards on the icy highways. Several drivers were forced to skid to a stop as the car ahead swerve dwithout a signal.

For the first time on record, a motorist was arraigned in Traffic Court, yesterday accused of fifth offense speed. John L. Lechlider, 20, appeared before Judge John P. McMahon and was sentenced to serve 90 days in jail or pay a $100 fine.

Other Jail Sentences.

And in addition to the speeding charges, Lechlider faced two charges of driving on a revoked permit. For this, Judge McMahon sentenced him to 45 days in jail on each count.

Today's Traffic Lesson.

(Quoted from Police Regulation.)

"No person shall drive a vehicle upon any highway at a greater speed than is reasonable and prodent, having due regard to the traffic, surface and width of the highway and the hazard at intersections and any other conditions then existing.

"The speed of any vehicle on any street, highway or bridge in the District of Columbia shall not exceed 22 miles per hour and shall not exceed 30 miles per hour on such highways as may be designated by placing of official signs.

"Any individual violating any provision of this section, except where the offense constitutes reckless driving, shall upon conviction for the first offense be fined not more than $25; upon conviction of a second offense committed within one year from the date of conviction for the first offense, such individual shall be fined not more than $100, and upon conviction for the third or any subsequent offense committed within one year from the date of conviction from the date of conviction of the first offense such individual shall be fined not more than $300 or be imprisoned not more than 90 days, or both."

Fascist Forces Attack Madrid On Two Fronts

110 Italians Captured by Defenders; Gen. Franco Reports Gains.

By the Associated Press.

Spanish insurgent forces launched heavy attacks on two fronts east of Madrid yesterday in what was reported to be a co-ordinated drive against the beleaguered capital.

Generalissimo Francisco Franco's army on the Guadalajara front, northeast of Madrid, reported severe casualties to government troops. Insurgent dispatches said defense forces were routed in a wave of counter-attacks.

Most of the fighting centered in the Tajuna River valley, the "Groove" southeast of Madrid along which insurgent flying columns were reported to have orders to close Madrid's vital corridor to the sea.

Gen. Franco's commanders reported at least 200 government soldiers were killed and 10 airplanes shot down in battles with insurgent squadrons.

Four explosions, apparently from government mines in the University City sector of Madrid, rocked the capital as insurgent artillery shells ripped great holes in downtown buildings.

Meager reports from the embattled section in the city's northwest described the explosions as a new attempt to drive insurgents from their barricaded positions there.

Communiques said the government troops scattered an insurgent attack in two wooded areas near Trijueque, 14 miles north of the city of Guadalajara. They claimed capture of machine guns, antitank guns, a field piece and many prisoners, including 110 Italians.

Madrid Sends Note to U. S.

Ambassador Fernando de los Rios, of Spain, yesterday delivered to the State Department a note calling attention of this government to matters charged in the Spanish protest to the League of Nations against invasion of Spain by troops of other nations.

In the absence of Secretary Hull, Assistant Secretary R. Walton Moore received the note, which calls for no action or reply by the United States, being submitted only as a matter of information.

Pastor Is Indicted In Murder of Wife

Beckley, W. Va., March 15 (AP).—The Raleigh County grand jury indicted the Rev. Monta H. Ball for murder today in connection with the shotgun death on March 5 of his 29-year-old second wife.

Officials said the trial date for the 38-year-old Rock Creek Methodist Episcopal minister would be set when Judge Harley M. Kilgore holds arraignments Thursday.

Ball, who waived preliminary hearing last Monday, later was denied bail.

Awarded Divorce

MRS. HARRIET McKEE STINSON.

NevadaDivorce Decree Is Won By Mrs. Stinson

Couple Socially Prominent in District; Cruelty Was Charged.

Mrs. Harriet McKee Stinson yesterday won an uncontested divorce from Joseph Whitla Stinson, formerly an attorney in the Latin-American division of the Department of State, it was reported by the Associated Press from Reno, Nev.

The couple was married December 17, 1925. Mrs. Stinson charged cruelty.

The couple was socially prominent. In the Washington Social Register for this year their address was given as the Warrenton Country Club, Warrenton, Va.

Stinson, who was with the State Department for many years and was the author of articles on the League of Nations and the World Court, is prominent as a painter of water colors. He has exhibited his paintings at the New York and Philadelphia water color clubs, the Chicago Art Museum and at the Corcoran Gallery of Art.

Annulment of Marriage Sought by Judith Allen

Los Angeles, March 15 (AP).—Judith Allen, film actress, abandoned her divorce suit today, and substituted a petition for annulment of her marriage to Jack Doyle, prizefighter and actor.

She said neither she nor Doyle complied with Mexican law when they were married in Agua Caliente, April 28, 1935. Her suit charged nonsupport.

Revolutionary Soldier's Tomb Broken; Vandalism Suspected

Pilaster Supporting Marble Slab on Grave of Unknown Warrior at Alexandria Shattered; Souvenir Hunters, Weather Blamed.

Discovery of a broken pilaster, one of the supports of the marble slab marking the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier of the Revolution, in the cemetery of the First Presbyterian Church in Alexandria, has led to much speculation.

The broken pilaster was discovered by Russell Thompson, caretaker, who notified the Alexandria police. Detective Sergt. Joseph P. Butler, said he believed the damage was done by a sightseer while trying to chip off a souvenir. Others believe it was the work of a vandal.

However, a careful examination reveals that in erecting the memorial, a hole had been bored in the top of each pilaster, and in the marble slab forming the cover, and a metal pin set into the pilaster. It may be possible that either the pilaster was cracked in boring the hole, and the crack gradually was widened by temperature changes, or water may have found its way into the hole, freezing and cracking the pilaster.

The piece broken off weighed several pounds.

Funds for the memorial were contributed by the Children of the Revolution, and on February 22, 1928, in the presence of members of the American Legion, descendants of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, Sons of the Revolution, Colonial Dames, Mount Vernon and Kate Waller Barrett chapters and national officers of the D. A. R., the memorial was unveiled by Mrs. Mary G. Powell, whose book, "The History of Old Alexandria," was published the same year.

Costello Post to Meet.

Vincent B. Costello Post, No. 15, American Legion, will meet at 8:15 p. m. today at the Carlton Hotel. Department Commander Horace E. Lineburg will attend and speak.

Nazis Enslave Labor, Lewis Charges in N.Y.

Tells Jewish Session 'Fear Now Is King' in Germany.

13 United States Senators and 37 Representatives.

Gen. Johnson asserted that this country does not "presume to tell other peoples how they should be governed, but we have a right to stand here on our shores and tell other peoples how we will not be governed."

He attacked communism as heatedly as fascism, saying:

"Since the day the Kaiser tore up the scrap of paper which was his solemn obligation to defend Belgium and not attack her, there is not one of these Fascist or Communist powers that has not repudiated its most solemn agreements under the plea of necessity."

Johnson asserted "a paid Nazi propaganda is in progress here. The whole mess of dirty intrigue and attempted seduction of American citizenship doesn't yet amount to anything. I mention it merely to show the intent; method and spirit of these hateful new forms of government—fascism and communism."

"It is a new thing in the world—this deliberate assault on the institutions of one country, by official attempts to bore within from another country.

"It is an evil abroad in the world like a plague. Japan infiltrates China, then seizes her not as an act of war but as an act of revolution. Italy and Germany on the one hand, and Russia on the other, infiltrate Spain and almost destroy her. Nations cannot fight an unseen foe. It is uncivilized and irresponsible warfare like sniping, shooting in the back, poisoning wells * * *."

Johnson spoke of German "products of kindness and gentleness," and said nothing "so good and so beautiful could possibly come from a common parentage with anything so cruelly vile as the crew that now sits in the Kaiser's seat astride the neck of the German people."

"The threat that hangs over the world—the chief barrier to the return of work and decent living everywhere—is in the hands of not more than a dozen men, and the chief of them is Hitler."

Gen. Johnson charged that "German consulates are canvassing German-Americans to learn how many will enlist under the swastika in case of war. Nazis boast that 10,000 Storm Troops are already enrolled here and 25,000 are expected this year. We have Nazi youth camps where little uniformed Nazi cherubs learn to goose step and are taught to pervert their little American playmates to Naziism and see how far they can horn into the Boy Scouts.

"They once tried to ooze their stooges into the National Guard and the journal of the Nazi party in America now carries an advertisement suggesting that German-Americans enlist in a particular National Guard battery."

The "rule of force," Johnson said, was exemplified both in Germany and Russia and he added:

"This bestiality breaking suddenly through the cerements of centuries of civilization—there must be some explanation of it, and I think there is. But that explanation will be found in the psychopathic wards of hospitals and not in historical analysis. This rule by force—this political animalism—there is something sadistic, perverted, abnormal, unclean about these welterers in human blood, these sybarites in cruelty, these voluptuaries in the misery of mankind * * *" with them in a secret place so that they could speak freely.

"There is something rotten when strong men must cringe when they tel lthe truth. We are going to the bottom of the affair, and those who are not guilty will have nothing to fear."

The Welfare Island prison scandal to which Senator Bridges alluded shook New York and the Nation early in 1934. It was found that a beer racketeer, Joseph Rao, and his henchmen had virtually taken over the place. "The bosss" had appropriated two wards of the prison hospital, ousted the patients and installed himself and his friends in luxury.

Rao had a valet who shined his shoes, cooked his meals and waited on him generally. e kept pigeons and used them to fly dope into the prison for sale to inmates. Prisoners who could not pay in money paid in food they had stolen. About a third of the prisoners never troubled to go into mess halls. They were satellies of "the boss," and were served in their cels on stolen foodstuffs. They burned more than 1,000 books from the library to prepare their meals. Unmentionable vice flourished.

When these conditions finally came to light, after having been hidden for several months, there was a sensational investigation and high prison officials were indicted and convicted.

Hanfstaengl's Friends Expect Him to Return

To Complete Secret Trip Despite 'Liquidation' of His Berlin Job.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 15.—Dr. Ernst "Putzi" Hanfstaengl's office aides expressed the conviction today he will come back to Berlin in three or four weeks from his "secret mission," but he'll find his job liquidated when he does.

Hanfstaengl, presumably now in Spain, continues a member in good standing of the National Socialist (Nazi) Party. But his office—chief of foreign press affairs for the party—is considered superfluous. It was pointed out his erstwhile contacts with the foreign world now devolved upon official quarters, such as the foreign office and the propaganda ministry.

Dr. Hanfstaengl's secretarial staff got their notices today—effective June 30.

From the beginning of the Nazi regime "Putzi" has had enemies—notably Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, high priest of the Nazi world outlook and Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda and public enlightenment. Later, Joachim von Ribbentrop, the present Ambassador to London, came in as one of "Putzi's" pet aversions.

Hitler was bound to Dr. Hanfstaengl by years of closse association. In the dangerous days of 1923 he even hid at "Putzi's" home.

Late in October of 1934, however, Hitler and his friend had a sharp quarrel at a round-table luncheon. Never after that was Dr. Hanfstaengl received by Der Fuehrer. The quarrel, it was reported, was over persons authorized to speak for the Nazi Party in the United States.

Since then, Dr. Hanfstaengl had tried again and again to stage a comeback, but without success.

Shortly before starting on his "confidential mission" last February 10, Dr. Hanfstaengl made a trip to London and Paris, the results of which appeared to satisfy Der Fuehrer. He sent him a personal message of thanks.

That put Dr. Hanfstaengl in a rapture over the possibility of reconciliation.

Too Many Chiefs.

Dessau, Germany, March 15 (AP).—Germany has too many press chiefs, Capt. Wilhelm Weiss, German Press Associations official, charged tonight in an address warning against shattering of public confidence in the press, lest the Nationalist state itself suffer.

Without mentioning the recent stir over anti-American articles in Berlin newspapers, Capt. Weiss avowed it was time editors were given a chance to take direction from one superior—not six or seven.

"We have too many press chiefs in Germany," he said bluntly.

Spying Charged To Nazis in U. S.

By the United Press.

Representative Samuel Dickstein (Democrat), New York, told the House yesterday that he has documentary proof that a Nazi organization of nearly 200,000 alien spices and agitators "is operating in this country, financed by "millions in German money."

Hhe charged German youths in America are permitted to drill here instead of returning to Germany when conscripted for military servive, and that more than 100,000 of the alleged members of the American Nazi organization are in uniform.

Dickstein assailed Fritz Huhn, who he named as head of the organization, as "a confounded liar and perjurer" in connection with Kuhn's statement that his group's activities are part of general American opposition to Communism.

David Yarnell, U. S. Engineer, Is Buried Here

Drainage Expert, Prominent Mason and Churchman, Died at 52 in Iowa.

David Yarnell, 52, senior drainage engineer of the Bureau of Agricultural Engineering and one-time winner of the James R. Croes prize of the American Society of Civil Engineers, who died recently at Iowa City, Iowa, was buried yesterday at the Congressional Cemetery here.

Mr. Yarnell was engaged in drainage engineering work with the Department of Agriculture from 1909 until 1922. Since that time he had done hydraulic research work for the Bureau of Agricultural Engineering and the hydraulic laboratory at Iowa City, his work being carried on in co-operation with the University of Iowa. He was the author of more than 25 professional papers and bulletins.

A Mason and a churchman, he was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Society of Agricultural Engineers, the Iowa Engineering Society, Tau Beta Pi honorary engineering fraternity, Sigma Xi, honorary scientific society and other professional and scientific organizations.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Alice Lee Roche Yarnell, formerly of Washington; two brothers, Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, U. S. N., commander of the Asiatic fleet, and Ross Yarnell Shearon, of Fergus Falls, Minn., and two sisters, Mrs. Henry Weber, of Pasadena, Calif., and Mrs. W. P. Bair, of Des Moines, Iowa.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Ted Shawn and his men dancers in Constitution Hall Monday night present "O Libertad," an American saga in three sections: The Past, The Present and The Future. Accompanying music composed and adapted by Jess Meeker.

Since Ted Shawn started his experimental group of men dancers several seasons ago, the experiment has proved a demonstration by the test of popular interest. Moreover he has by the method of trial and error worked out a progam integrated by a scenario and set in a perspective of time. Gone are the "visualization" of Bach inventions and the "interpretations" of composition. The music, composed for the most part by Jess Meeker, arises directly from the choreography, and approximates the primitive relation between the dance and music.

The portion of the program representing the past has for its milieu the western side of the American continent, beginning with the fall of the Aztec empire. One of the results of the religion imposed upon the natives is represented by "Los Hermanos Penitentes," the sect of flagellants in the Southwest. The economic change has its symbol in a scene of peons at work and a dance of the arrogant Spanish hacendado, and the Anglo-Saxon dominance arrives with the placer gold miners in California.

The present epoch is treated, with many a touch of satire, in an Olympiad series of sport dances, in a rather grisly pantomime of war, in the jazz decade, depression, recovery and a comic march of the veterans of future wars. In the forecast of the future, Shawn uses again the "Kinetic Molpai" which has been a part of his program before. Thus does the circle come to its completion, for molpai, according to Gilbert Murray, was the ancient art combining all arts.

Despite the pictorial and chronological aspects of the program, it is evident that Shawn is returning in his choreography to the primeval principle of the dance as a propitiatory ritual. Man danced originally to please the unknown powers that he feared. In the "Kinetic Molpai" is the hint that the dance may again become an act of conciliation with the forces that sunder men today.

Hush-Hush Or Health?

Doctors Urge Adequate Funds For Venereal Diseases Control

All Authorities Agreed That Appropriations Should Be Commensurate With Seriousness and Importance of Conditions Existing in District.

By Gerald Gross.

(This article is one in a series to acquaint citizens with the tragic neglect of the venereal disease problem in the District of Columbia.)

Physicians and laymen who are concerning themselves with veneral disease control differ all over the lot on such moot proposals as free drugs, routine blood tests in hospitals and legalized prostitution. But one and all they are united in urging two broad methods of attack.

If the National Capital earnestly wishes to cut down its high case rate, deaths from congenital syphilis, gonorrheal blindness of the newborn, the crime and insanity of spirochete origin and the untold economic loss caused by the twin disablers, their advice is:

To demand adequate appropriations which will enable the Health Department to meet the challenge on a scale commensurate with its seriousness and importance.

To promote free discussion so that syphilis and gonorrhea will no longer be considered "bad words" but, rather, a public matter that must be confronted just as surely as income taxes, smallpox vaccination and stream pollution.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland stresses the need for health centers, or polyclinics, which would offer many types of service: Veneral disease, tuberculosis, maternal and child welfare, dental, mental hygiene, health education, etc.

Bill Provides for Center.

The 1939 District supply bill now before Congress provides for establishment of one such center, which would do away with the social stigma—as so many see it—of attending a clinic which is for syphilis and gonorrhea cases only.

Dr. Ruhland points out that the District is budgeting 4 cents per capita for venereal disease control, where as public health standards call for 8 to 10 cents.

Though the quarters and personnel of the social hygiene clinic are sadly overtaxed in accommodating 75,000 visits a year, they should be taking care of 90,000 in a city of this size, Dr. Ruhland says.

Thus, you have the paradoxical situation of a health officer encouraging the untreated to avail themselves of the city's services though present facilities are inadequate to handle even the present burden as it should be done.

"Given co-operation of the public and the necessary funds, we can do what the Scandanavian countries have," acording to Dr. Ruhland.

(Norway, Sweden and Denmark, whose combined population is roughly 20 times that of the District have less than 1,600 cases of syphilis a year, or about one-third the number reported here.)

All persons treated in private hospital dispensaries and many of those bound for the municipality's various free clinics pass through the Central Admitting Bureau for their passes or referral slipts. The head of the bureau, who also is health secretary of the Council of Social Agencies, is well qualified to offer an abatement program.

Ross Garrett would place all public health facilities under the Health Department, which would mean transfer of Gallinger Hospital and the tuberculosis sanitaria from the Board of Public Welfare; have all clinics supplied with free syphilis-treatment drugs by the Government; make thorough physical examination of food handlers mandatory; expand Health Department laboratories; strengthen the personnel of the I street clinic and establish health centers where they are needed most.

Besides, Garrett espouses the founding of a master file, or clearing house, in which the names of all persons registered at all venereal disease clinics would be kept and their attendance checked.

At present, many people actually go clinic "shopping." They will register at one, appear for a few treatments, and then, with or without cause, transfer to another. As likely as not, they will not inform the second clinic they have been under treatment before. This handicaps the physician and may even work out dangerously for the patient.

The master file, Garrett argues, would result in clients being more careful to keep up their treatments in unbroken sequence, eliminate duplications in follow-up work, and have numerous other advantages. Its use has been adopted in New York.

Doctors Important Factor.

"The biggest factor in the control of syphilis and gonorrhea is the private physician," said Dr. ——. (A doctor himself, he asked that his name not be used.)

"True it is," continued this spokesman for a large venereal disease clinic, "that we doctors are awfully delinquent in reporting new cases. One way to correct that is to frank mail of this nature. If reports can be sent in postage-free there will be more of them."

He also recommended stricter enforcement of that section in the public health statutes which authorizes the health officer to force treatment on defiant disease-spreaders.

Legalized prostitution through licensing of houses, as recommended last year by Washington's former police chief, Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, also was put forth by the physician as another effective means of reducing the incidence of syphilis and gonorrhea. On this point Surgeon General Thomas Parran says:

"The effort to control syphilis by examination of prostitutes as it has been tried in many European countries, and even now is occasionally advocated in the United States, is utterly inadequate to meet even that 25 per cent of the syphilis problem affected by commercial prostitution."

E. P. Kimball, Noted Organist, Is Dead Here

Funeral Today for Mormon Prominent in Church and Civic Affairs.

One of America's most noted church musicians, Edward P. Kimball, 55, died at his home at 2810 Sixteenth street northwest, yesterday of cerebal hemorrage, following a brief illness.

Services will be held today at 1 p. m. at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, where Kimball was organist the past three years. Samuel Carpenter, president of the Washington branch of the Mormon Church, will have charge of the service. Later the body will be sent to Salt Lake City for burial.

Born in Utah.

Born and reared in Utah, Mr. Kimball received his musical education in New York and Berlin. He was organist of the famous Mormon Tabernacle in Salt Lake City for 25 years before he came to Washington in 1933 as missionary for the Mormon Church and as organist for its Capital branch.

Mr. Kimball was closely identified with the civic life of both cities. In Salt Lake City, he was a leader in the Rotary Club and was president of that organization in 1928. When he came to Washington, he transferred his membership to the local Rotary Club, and for the past two years has served as its secretary.

In addition to his civic and church activity, Mr. Kimball for a number of years was a teacher of organ and piano in the McCune School of Music in Salt Lake City.

Missionary to Berlin.

When he was a very young man, Mr. Kimball served his first church mission in Germany, remaining in that country from 1902 to 1905. He returned to Berlin in 1913 and spent a year studying music. In 1929 he went back once more as a Mormon missionary.

Mr. Kimball is survived by his widow, Mrs. Hazel B. Kimball; a daughter, Mrs. Don C. Corbett, of 1601 Argonne place northwest; a son, Edward B. Kimball, of Washington, better known as "Ted" Kimball, radio announcer; his father, Albert H. Kimball; a sister, Mrs. Fern K. Thomas, and two brothers, Clifbee and Ernest Kimball, all of Salt Lake City, and a sister, Mrs. Alta K. Hammer, of San Francisco.

Funeral Arrangements.

W. LaMarr Webb, a member of the presidency of the local branch of the church, and J. Willard Marriott, Maurice Barnes, Riley A. Gwynn, Melvin C. Merrill and Ernest L. Wilkinson were named yesterday to be Mr. Kimball's pallbearers.

The invocation will be intoned by Judge G. A. Iverson and the benediction by Abram K. Cannon. Addresses will be delivered by E. B. Brossard, the Rev. Dr. Charles P. Warner, president of the Rotary Club, and Donald B. Colton, president of the Eastern States Mission.

Arlington Rites Held For Maj. Gen. Butner

Funeral services for Maj. Gen. Henry W. Butner, who died Saturday at Walter Reed Hospital, were held yesterday afternoon at Fort Myer Chapel, with Chaplain Ora J. Cohee officiating. Interment was in Section 7 of Arlington Cemetery, with full military honors.

Gen. Malin Craig, a roommate of Gen. Butner at West Point, was one of the honorary pallbearers. Others included Maj. Gen. Upton Birnie, jr., Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, retired; Brig. Gen. Charles D. Roberts, Col. Harvey W. Miller, Col. Edmund L. Gruber, Col. William Bryden and Col. Charles W. Exton.

Scientists Attend Rites Of Dr. Elihu Thomson

Lynn, Mass., March 15 (AP).—World-renowned educators and scientists paid homage today to Dr. Elihu Thomson, famous inventor and contemporary of Thomas A. Edison, at funeral services here.

Dr. Thomson, famed for his researches in electricity, and holder of more than 700 patents, including those for electric arc welding, the centrifugal cream separator, the wattmeter and scores of other types of machinery, died at his home in Swampscott Saturday at the age of 83.

Funeral Is Held Here for Noted New York Poet

Mrs. Leacy Green-Leach, Heart Attack Victim, Buried Privately.

Funeral services were held yesterday at Chambers' undertaking establishment for Mrs. Leacy Naylor Green-Leach, New York poet and founder and editor of the American Poetry Circle, who died of a heart attack while on a visit here Friday. Private burial followed.

Mrs. Green-Leach was the widow of the late Madison Leach, of North Carolina. She made her home for some years in Baltimore, where she founded her magazine, devoted entirely to verse.

The poet is survived by a son, James Green-Leach, of Washington, and a daughter, Mrs. George M. Bemis, of New York. She also leaves a sister, Mrs. Mary Mason Norris; a brother, Raleigh Travis, and a number of nieces and nephews, among them James W. Green, editor of the Orange (Va.) News.

Of distinguished ancestry, Mrs. Green-Leach was a daughter of the late Maj. James W. Green, of Richmond and Culpeper. She was the great-great-granddaughter of George Mason, of Gunston Hall, author of the Bill of Rights.

She also was descended from Col. John William Green, Virginia Supreme Court justice; Thomas Claiborne Green, and William Naylor, who came to America with William Penn, founder of Philadelphia.

Briton Finds Yankees 'More Fit' Than English

London, March 15 (AP).—Lord Aberdare, chairman of Britain's council on physical fitness for defense, returned from the United States today with the observation "the average American probably is more fit than the Englishman" because of athletic training in schools.

Police Capture 18 Strikers in Hospital Riot

Truce Halts Battle in Brooklyn; Girls Sit Down in Store.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 15.—Police and striking employes of Jewish Hospital in Brooklyn fought through service sections of the institution today until a member of the hospital board halted the scrimmage with a truce.

Police arrested 18 sit-down strikers on charges of endangering the public health. The others agreed to return to work pending the outcome of a conference arranged by Henry Brouder of the hospital board.

Brouder announced the truce as emergency squads of police were advancing on the hospital ice plant, where 35 strikers were barricaded. The battling employes of the main kitchen, using mops and brooms, had repulsed the officers. Police, with axes, chopped a way through the rear door for reinforcements.

The employes returned to work. The police left with their 18 prisoners, who were taken to Flatbush Court. A spokesman for the strikers said they sought a wage increase, two weeks' annual vacation, and recognition of the hospital employes' union.

The hospital strike was the latest in a series of sit-downs which began after employes of four 5-10- and 25-cent stores in the F. & W. Grand Co. chain started a strike Saturday.

Employes of 23 Brooklyn cash and carry laundry plants were called from their work today by the laundry workers' union, which demanded a 40-hour week, minimum wage agreements in all departments, a 25 per cent increase in pay, and time and a half for all overtime. There was no violence as the strikers, which the union said numbered 1,000, left their jobs.

A plate glass window was smashed and the coat torn from George Miller, union organizer, as he attempted to dash into one of the two Manhattan stores on strike "to see that the girls get a square deal," while other union leaders were passing in food under the surveillance of a patrolman. He was allowed to remain inside after the manager refused to file a charge against him.

Etta Kreiner, a spokesman for the union, said the 125 strikers voted unanimously to reject a reported offer from the employers of a wage increase for all workers conditional upon evacuation of the four stores.

"The girls agreed to bargain only through the union," she said. "They decided to stick until they win."

The Cloisters, home of Gothic design, the Brooklandville residence, of Mr. and Mrs. Sumner A. Parker, which was offered, Parker said yesterday at Cherbourg, France, to the Duke of Windsor. Parker indicated negotiations for the sale were almost completed.

Edward Plans Buying Home In Maryland

Duke of Windsor to Meet Mrs. Simpson Easter in France.

Monts or whether the duke and Mrs. Simpson would come to Paris.

London, March 15.—An Easter meeting in France with Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson is being planned by the Duke of Windsor, trustworthy Austrian advices reaching London said today.

The former British monarch, it was said, still is planning to wed about April 27 or May 1. (Mrs. Simpson's divorce decree from Ernest Aldrich Simpson may become final about April 27.)

The informant said the duke's trip to France probably would be announced from his Enzesfeld, Austria, retreat as a "three or four day Easter excursion."

Windsor was reported planning to start the trip next week, with the reunion to be held in or near Paris.

(At Monts, France, Herman L. Rogers, spokesman for Mrs. Simpson, declared he knew nothing of the reported reunion plans.)

It was reported the former king is planning the late April or early May marriage date after being persuaded by his brother, the Duke of Kent, that a change merely would arouse additional publicity.

The Austrian period for publication of the marriage banns is expected to be shortened considerably for the duke.

Baltimore, March 15 (AP).—The home of Mr. and Mrs. Sumner A. Parker, The Cloisters, which, Parker said in France today, has been offered for sale to the Duke of Windsor, is an architecturally unique show-spot of Maryland.

Parker, a Baltimore steel manufacturer, and his wife designed the structure and directed its building atop a steep hill in a tract of rolling woodland near Brooklandville about six years ago. In its design are blended the variations of three centuries of Gothic building.

The Parkers conceived the idea for the distinctly European-appearing home more than 15 years ago and spent years thereafter collecting various materials in Europe. The timbered gables were brought from Domremy, where Joan of Arc was born.

2 Athletes Die, Coach, 5 Mates Hurt in Wreck

Florida College Fencers Crash on Way to Series of Eastern Matches.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, March 15.—Two Rollins (Florida) College students were killed and two others and a professor seriously injured near here today when a large sedan carrying the undefeated fencing team to scheduled matches with Northern schools swerved from the rainswept Richmond - Petersburg highway, crashed against a telephone pole and burned.

Don Cheney, 20, of Orlando, Fla., and Malcolm Carlies, 19, of East Orange, N. J., met instant death when the machine, attempting to pass another car swerved off the pavement onto the soft road shoulder and spun out of control.

Three Escape With Bruises.

Prof. William Roney, 43-year-old modern language professor and coach of the fencing team, was injured seriously, as were Jack Hagenbuch, 18, of Newark, N. J., the driver, and Gene Townsend, 21, of Orlando. Oscar Ehrhor, jr., 19, of New York; George E. Fuller, 20, of Mobile, Ala., and Don Alfred Cetrulo, 20, team captain, were bruised slightly, but did not require hospitalization.

At Memorial Hospital here physicians said Hagenbuch and Prof. Roney appeared the most seriously hurt, although all suffered concussions of the brain. Hagenbuch, who suffered a depressed fracture of the skull, probably will be operated on tomorrow, they said.

Roney received several severe scalp lacerations and several fractured ribs. His skull apparently was not fractured, as first was feared, attendants said.

Townsend escaped with deep scalp lacerations and concussion and appeared the least dangerously hurt of the three.

All were conscious tonight and resting "fairly" well, the hospital said.

Cetrulo and his two teammates who were not hurt, registered at the Richmond Y. M. C. A. to await advices from school authorities.

"We were driving to Annapolis, where we had a meet with Navy tomorrow afternoon," the team captain said. "We left school (near Winter Park, Fla.) at 5 a. m. yesterday morning and spent last night near Raleigh. We took turns driving the eight-passenger sedan.

"We were headed toward Richmond shortly after noon today with Hagenbuch driving. He attempted to pass another car headed the same way and it seemed like a wheel slipped from the road. Then the car flipped around and hit the pole. Everyone was pulled out before it caught fire."

Electrocuted for Attack.

Nashville, Tenn., March 15 (AP).—James Taylor, 14-year-old colored houseboy convicted of an attack and attempted criminal assault on his employer, a Nashville housewife, died in the electric chair today.

Stunt-Flying Exhibition Is Set for May 29-31

America's first international stunt flying competition will be staged at St. Louis, May 29-31, it was announced last night by the National Aeronautic Association. The competition will headline a three-day schedule of air racing and flight exhibitions, with minimum cash prizes totaling $15,000.

A world record speed trial for light planes of the second category and a national record speed trial for women pilots, both to be run over a 100-kilometer course, are included in the ten-event schedule.

Hundreds of Guests Stranded As Strike Ties Up Detroit Hotel

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, March 15.—An employes' strike suspended service in the Statler Hotel, one of the largest in Detroit, late today.

While negotiations were in progress in another hotel on Statler wages, hours and union recognition, a strike committee walked through a side entrance of the Statler and shouted "strike."

Observers said virtually all employes except the desk clerks joined in the strike.

Among guests without service was Lily Pons, the singer. She was stranded on the twelfth floor, in the presidential suite. Her request for dinner in her room went unanswered.

She then threatened to stage her own sit-down strike at her next concert.

Elevators stopped, leaving several hundred guests stranded on the upper floors.

The Statler was the largest hotel to be affected by the wave of sit-down strikes here. Other strikes, in the Webster Hall and Barlum Hotels, were settled within a few hours.

As the strike was called, elevator operators lowered their cages to the first floor and left their posts. Engineers shut off the elevator power. In the kitchen, chefs and helpers sat down beside their stoves and mixing tables. Bellmen disappeared.

The telephone switchobard soon was swamped with calls from guests.

Unions involved are the International Bartenders Alliance, the Waiters and Waitresses Union, Engineers and Opertors, Cooks and Chefs and miscellaneous help which is being organized by the Detroit and Wayne County Federation of Labor. The hotel has 650 employes.

Striking employes said the only issue unsettled in the neogtiations was the demand of the unions for exclusive bargaining rights.

Ballinger Is Now Trade Aide After Trouble in SEC

Willis J. Ballinger, who resigned from the Securities and Exchange Commission after he had become a "storm center," has been made an economic adviser of the Federal Trade Commission, it was learned yesterday.

Thus, Administration officials reached an amicable solution to what at one time appeared to be the makings of a "cause celebre." Ballinger's resignation from the SEC was requested by the commission after internal dispute. Ballinger's appointment to a responsible Trade Commission position seemed to clear up past difficulties and to reinstate Ballinger in New Deal circles. Persons familiar with the new job said it might be considered "an improvement" in position.

Officials at the Trade Commission said Ballinger assumed his new job yesterday. They said he would be engaged in research, particularly relating to problems under the Robinson-Patman fair practice law. Later, it is expected, Ballinger will resume his study of a possible Federal incorporation law, the study he had been making when he left the SEC.

Negotiations were resumed in the strike affecting 11,500 at the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., in Akron, Ohio.

One of the 21 strike-closed hosiery mills in Berks County, Pa., resumed operations. Philadelphia's first department-store "sit-down" ended in an agreement to negotiate on wages and hours. Seven hundred strikers returned to the H. D. Bob Clothing Co., in Sunbury, Pa.

1,000,000 Get Raises.

A survey showed almost 1,000,000 workers recently had been granted wage increases totaling more than $168,000,000 a year.

Pittsburgh, March 15 (AP).—The steel workers organizing committee in a brief conference today laid before the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation six pages of rules and regulations designed to govern working conditions of its members and to provide for arbitration of disputes.

Philip Murray, chairman of the committee, and right-hand lieutenant of John L. Lewis, led a group of associates to the meeting with Benjamin F. Fairless, president of the billion-dollar unit of the U. S. Steel Corporation.

The corporation's reply is expected to be ready tomorrow, when another session has been tentatively scheduled.

Sally Eilers says:

"My voice and throat are grateful for Luckies"

"Making a picture is obviously a tax on my throat. And because my voice is my stock in trade, my throat is grateful for a light smoke, and by that I mean Luckies. Days are certainly long when shooting a picture, and I do plenty of smoking, so you see I want a light smoke which, at the end of the day, is comfortable to my throat. I certainly get a lot of relaxation and pleasure out of Luckies."

Sally Eilers

CO-STAR OF NEW UNIVERSAL PICTURE "WE HAVE OUR MOMENTS"

An independent survey was made recently among professional men and women—lawyers, doctors, lecturers, scientists, etc. Of those who said they smoke cigarettes, more than 87% stated they personally prefer a light smoke.

Miss Eilers verifies the wisdom of this preference, and so do other leading artists of the radio, stage, screen and opera. Their voices are their fortunes. That's why so many of them smoke Luckies. You, too, can have the throat protection of Luckies—a light smoke, free of certain harsh irritants removed by the exclusive process "It's Toasted". Luckies are gentle on the throat.

Parole System For Adults in D. C. Assailed

Speakers at Monday Evening Club Deplore Public Apathy.

Parole and probation systems for adult offenders, particularly the systems used in the District, were censured last night in addresses before the Monday Evening Club, in Barker Hall in the Y. W. C. A.

Four speakers, Joseph Y. Reeves, probation officer of the United States District Court; Robert Lee Smith, probation officer of the police court; Ray L. Huff, parole executive of the Department of Justice, and Dr. Louis N. Robinson, chairman of the Prisons Industries Reorganization Administration, joined in condemning the present systems, with emphasis upon local conditions. They directed their attack at public apathy and legislative indifference, pointing out that the parole board and local administrators were not responsible.

Parole Officer Speaks.

Introduced by John E. Laskey, chairman of the Division on a Model Corrective System for the District, Parole Officer Smith described development of the probation system in Police Court, and called attention to the inadequacies of appropriations and number of officers. He emphasized that the new Police Court building being constructed at a cost of about $1,500,000 would not include any provision for the probation force. Reeves offered statistics for the District Court, with five officers caring for 866 probationers during the last fiscal year, whereas 100 is regarded as the maximum number that can be satisfactorily handled by one officer.

Parole and probation systems in the District exist only in the law, according to Huff, third speaker in the program, "What Are We Going to Do Abqut the Adult Offenders in the District?" He discussed the elements of parole system, adding that parole is not a form of clemency and preparation for parole should begin at the time sentence is passed.

Need for Statesmanship.

Dr. Lewis stated, "Here's a real branch for statesmanship—a neglected branch of statesmanship." He approached the subject historically, concluding that incarceration is "not a God-ordained method" of punishment or correction, showing that it had been used extensively only since the late eighteenth century. Differentiation of prisoners, after case histories have been carefully investigated at a central clinic, was recommended as one desirable change in the prison system. He also condemned public apathy toward prisoners, once they have been incarcerated, although the greater portion of punishment and correction still lies ahead of them.

In a business meeting members unanimously decided to protest to Senator King and the District Commissioners against changes, contemplated by the Senate, in the District Juvenile Court Bill.

Copper Order Let For District Yard

The Navy's shortage of copper, which at one time threatened wholesale paralyzing of Navy yards, including the local yard, yesterday was further relieved with the announcement a contract had been let for 500,000 pounds, destined for the Washington yard. Last Wednesday contracts were let for 1,700,000 pounds, 600,000 pounds going to Washington. Yesterday's contract, awarded to Calumet & Hecla Consolidated Copper Co., was at 16.475 cents per pound.

The Navy Department also announced contracts had been let for $71,550 worth of shore construction, none near Washington. Although one contract called for electrical equipment for a shore establishment, no evident progress has been made in breaking the deadlock over electrical equipment for destroyers and submarines. Authoritative estimates state construction of 11 vessels is being delayed, due to manufacturers' refusal to abide by wage restrictions of the Walsh-Healey act.

Joseh Kahahawai, suspect in the attack, was murdered. Lieut. Massie, his mother-in-law, Mrs. Granville Fortescue, and two enlisted men were found guilty of manslaughter following the death of Kahahawai. Their sentence was commuted to one hour in custody.

Civil Service Data Sought by Senate

The Senate yesterday called on the Civil Service Commission to produce figures showing the number of civil service employes in Washington and the number from each State. Similar statistics on civil service employes outside of Washington also are requested.

Senator Hayden (Democrat), of Arizona, introduced the resolution calling for the statstics which passed the Senate without debate. He would not indicate whether he intended to use the statistics as the basis for future legislation.

The resolution stresses that seven States and the District have exceeded their quota of civil service employes under the apportionment law. The apportionment law, however, it was pointed out, covers only 39,990 positions in the Federal Government. In Washington alone there are approximately 115,000 classified and unclassified civil service employes.

"The bulk of our 1937 advertising on White Star Tuna will again be invested in newspaper advertising," said R. P. Harper, vice president and general sales manager of Van Camp Sea Food Co., Inc., Terminal Island, Calif.

"The hundreds of thousands of entries produced by our 1936 slogan contest from our newspaper advertising gave positive proof of the productivity of this medium," said Harper. "It is for this reason an expanded newspaper campaign will be conducted on a $59,200 prize contest on White Star Tuna in The Washington Post and other newspapers.

5 Asked to Judge Corcoran Paintings

The Corcoran Gallery of Art announced yesterday invitation to five artists to serve as a jury for the Fifteenth Biennial Exhibition of Contemporary American Oil Paintings which will open March 28.

Those invited to serve on the jury, which will act also as the hanging committee and make the W. A. Clark prize awards, are:

William J. Glackens, of New York; John Stuart Curry, of Madison, Wis.; Daniel Garber, of Philadelphia and Lumberville, Pa.; Richard Lahey, of this city, and William M. Paxton, of Boston.

Paintings are being offered for the exhibition from every section of the United States, as well as Hawaii and the Virgin Islands. The exhibitions are national in scope and are generally regarded as the most representative of this character held in the country.

Canon DeVries Services Today

Funeral services for the Rev. William Levering DeVries, Canon and Precentor of Washington Cathedral, who died Sunday, will be held this morning at 10 o'clock at the Cathedral, with the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, reading offices for the dead. Bishop Freeman will be assisted by the Right Rev. Philip M. Rhinelander, Warden of the College of Preachers, and the Rev. Cornelius S. Abbott, vicar of the Chapel of the Good Shepherd.

Immediately after the service, there will be Holy Communion for members of his family and intimate friends. Music will be furnished by the Cathedral Choir.

The clergy of the Diocese of Washington have been invited to attend. The body of Canon DeVries will be buried in the Crypt of the Bethlehem Chapel, where he exercised his ministry for so many years.

"In the death of Dr. DeVries, the Cathedral loses one of its most trusted, faithful and learned advisers," Bishop Freeman said yesterday.

62,000 Children Aided In Shriners' Hospitals

Greenville, S. C., March 15 (AP).—Imperial Potentate Clyde R. Wrester, of Detroit, told the board of trustees of Shriners' Hospitals here today that nearly 62,000 children had been cured or materially benefited by treatment in the order's institutions for crippled children since the first was opened in 1922.

"The Shrine now has $9,000,000 invested in 15 hospitals for crippled children in the United States, costing $1,000,000 a year to operate," Webster said.

Strange Way To Aid Safety.

Howard S. Cullman, vice chairman of the National Committee on Safety at Sea, has properly asked Secretary Roper to explain the sudden abolition of that agency while its work remains uncompleted. In view of the extent of unfinished business in eliminating the hazards of ocean travel, the Secretary of Commerce owes the public as well as Mr. Cullman an explanation.

The National Committee on Safety at Sea was set up at the request of President Roosevelt as a result of several maritime disasters. Its job was to mobilize public opinion behind a sound program of ocean accident prevention. The committee has not spared the Department of Commerce when its findings indicated laxity in enforcement of the law, or failure to provide new safeguards against maritime tragedies.

Committees of this sort are normally discharged when their work is done. But in this case, as Mr. Cullman points out, the broad safety program outlined by the committee in April, 1936, still awaits action. There is an urgent need for more organized effort to bring about stringent safety regulations aboard ship. Summary dismissal of the committee under these circumstances leads naturally to a suspicion that it has trodden too heavily upon tender toes in the Department of Commerce:

That suspicion is strengthened by the fact that no part of the $35,000 appropriated by Congress for the National Accident Prevention Conference, of which Mr. Cullman's organization was a part, has been made available to that agency. Moreover, the other branches of the conference are continuing their work, which can scarcely be considered more important than safety at sea.

Does this mean that impartial fact-finding is not welcome to the Department of Commerce? Are committees assigned to study questions of vital interest to the public acceptable only when composed of "yes" men? In view of the safety committee's charge that the Bureau of Navigation fails to make 80 per cent of the inspections required by law the department has maneuvered itself into a very embarrassing position.

Controlling Foods And Drugs.

Senator Copeland's pure food, drugs and cosmetics bill slipped through the Senate last week with surprisingly little notice. For three years the New York Senator's efforts to tighten Federal control over the movement of these commodities interstate commerce have been a center of dispute. The unanimous approval finally granted his bill in the Senate is a tribute to his persistence as well as his willingness to compromise.

In some respects the prohibitions in the bill are still drastic. It provides severe penalties for the shipment in interstate commerce of any food, drug or cosmetic that is adulterated or misbranded. It would prevent the dissemination through the mails or in interstate commerce of any false or misleading advertisement regarding foods, drugs and cosmetics and their uses. But there is no attempt to subject to criminal prosecution publishers and broadcasting companies that may inadvertently disseminate a misleading "ad" of this character. In sharp distinction to some previous bills, this measure simply provides for court injunctions restraining any person from misrepresenting commodities vitally affecting the public health.

Traffic in food that is dangerous to health would also be forbidden. Moreover, consumers would be protected against the abstraction of valuable constituents from any food and from the addition of any substance to a food with the object of increasing its bulk or reducing its quality or strength. Careful regulations are laid down to prevent misbranding of foods and the use of deceptive containers. Any substance containing habit-forming drugs would have to be conspicuously so branded.

Interstate trade in cosmetics, some of which may be dangerous to health, would be brought under Federal control for the first time. Poisonous containers for either cosmetics, foods or drugs would be rigidly banned along with certain impure coal tar products.

By numerous and extensive revisions the Senate Committee on Commerce seems to have eliminated all of the more objectionable features of the original bill. As the measure was passed by the Senate it appears to be only a reasonable extension of the existing law to meet the current conditions and to tighten up ineffective methods of control. The need for more stringent regulation of commodities so vital to the public health as food, drugs and cosmetics has long been recognized. Unless the House can find some hidden defects in the bill that were not apparent to the Senate, it may be expected to accept the measure as a logical outcome of a protracted controversy.

Clarifying The Labor Picture.

Three current events in the field of labor relations help to clarify a problem the immediate national importance of which is scarcely subject to exaggeration.

Of primary significance is the clear-cut injunction issued yesterday by Circuit Judge Campbell, in Detroit, calling for the evacuation of sit-down strikers who for a week have occupied Chrysler Corporation properties there. It is of supreme importance that the terms of this order be obeyed promptly and without equivocation. Every really patriotic citizen hopes that the automobile workers' union will show good judgment and common sense by retracing its dangerous steps voluntarily.

Judge Campbell's ruling is a model of clear and simple reasoning. Whatever the grievances of the union, he points out, no right has been created "to seize and appropriate $50,000,000 worth of property of the plaintiff and to prevent by threats of violence any use of the property by the plaintiff or its agents."

The magnitude of this organized aggression merely points a moral which would be present if the value of the property seized were fifty and not fifty million dollars. Such illegal acts of expropriation are frankly revolutionary and cannot possibly be condoned by any government, local, State or national, worthy of the name. The flagrant picketing of the court over which he presided gave additional point to Judge Campbell's irrefutable conclusion that "there can be no compromise between the rule of law and the rule of violent self-help."

Of scarcely less importance in the field of labor relations is the reinstatement order affecting employes of the Remington Rand Corporation, handed down by the Labor Relations Board on Sunday night. The evidence submitted to support this order, comprising a long list of terroristic, provocative and oppressive anti-union activities, makes grim and thought-provoking reading.

The tactics of this corporation, by no means unique in contemporary American industrial history, in no way justifies or extenuates the sit-down strike technique. But it does help to explain why seizure of factories has been indorsed by otherwise responsible labor leaders. The National Labor Relations Board held lengthy hearings and collected sworn testimony in six cities before assembling the report now issued. Regardless of the eventual fate of this Federal agency—the Supreme Court still has to pass on its constitutionality—a debt of gratitude is owing for its contribution to a thorough understanding of factors underlying the present labor unrest.

The third event which helps to shape the general picture is the round-table conference, convened in Pittsburgh yesterday, to carry forward the agreement signed two weeks ago between the Carnegie-Illinois Corporation and the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, now a C. I. O. affiliate.

Here there is no question of revolutionary labor action on the one hand, or of feudal employer tactics on the other. Achievement of a formula which promises orderly industrial progress, instead of a progressively disastrous alternation of ruthless suppression and mass terrorism, is a bright spot in an otherwise very threatening sky.

A Salutary Revolt.

Signs are multiplying that the House, unlike the Senate, is by no means prepared to swallow mandatory neutrality legislation in the fond belief that it will keep the United States at peace. Reflecting the considered judgment of an increasing number of citizens, a large group of Representatives are convinced that only one kind of neutrality legislation is worth anything at all. That is the kind which permits the President a sufficient measure of discretion to enable him to act as circumstances warrant for the best interests of the Nation.

It is recognized, for instance, that the Pittman bill might, in the event of an European war involving Great Britain, interfere with or wholly cripple our normal trade with Canada, one of our best customers. No reasoning person favors such a development. That is why the discretionary features of the McReynolds bill, enabling the President to rule out the Great Lakes from the operations of the neutrality act, are being favored by more and more people.

It is also becoming clear that there is a real conflict between any kind of mandatory neutrality legislation and the Hull policy of reciprocal trade agreements. Nations fearing the loss of American sources of supply in wartime, and that means all countries lacking adequate sea power, are not likely to show any eagerness to sign reciprocal pacts if mandatory neutrality is put into force.

Fortunately that possibility becomes more and more remote. The rebellion in the House against the mandatory principle and in favor of a discretionary neutrality policy is a sign of awakening realism in the Capitol and in the Nation.

Delaying The Court Issue.

Administration forces have made their first concession in the controversy over reorganization of the Supreme Court. Hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee are to be delayed instead of hastened. President Roosevelt argued, only a week ago, that "we cannot delay one moment in making certain that our National Government has power to carry through." But Senator Ashurst, who is sponsoring the bill for the Administration, wants to avert a vote on it until July.

The legislative program has already been retarded by debate on the Supreme Court issue. If that question is to be intermittently discussed for months, the routine work of Congress, including enactment of the appropriation bills, will be correspondingly delayed. In that event the regulatory legislation which the President evidently has in mind for agriculture and industry would be postponed until 1938, unless the intention is to have no adjournment this summer.

Since the Administration insists that its hands are tied until "new blood" can be injected into the Supreme Court, it cannot logically press for the establishment of "new instruments of power" while the court issue is still pending. And should this fight continue until the middle of summer Congress would then be in no mood to enact an extensive program of controversial legislation. No doubt the divided Democratic majority would be especially loath to undertake such an assignment with a bitter fight behind it and the primaries only a short distance ahead.

It appears, therefore, that the delay which the President seeks to avoid is in some measure inevitable. Mr. Roosevelt has frequently referred to the differences of opinion that would prevent quick action if an attempt were made to frame a constitutional amendment. But it is doubtful if any proposed amendment would arouse as much controversy as is the case with the plan to pack the Supreme Court. The substitute proposals offered by Senators Norris, Pittman, O'Mahoney and others are sufficient to indicate the diversity of thought on the subject, even among Administration supporters.

The President is making a strategically wise concession in not trying to jam his proposal down the throat of Congress. If the people are to be denied their right of passing upon fundamental changes in our governmental system, discussion of those issues should certainly be unlimited in Congress. Since the Administration has gone this far, however, the advantages of adhering to the spirit of the Constitution in making changes of this character should be more readily apparent.

From the present outlook it would seem possible to secure the desired legislation through a constitutional amendment, ratified by conventions, in about the same time that would be required by the court-packing method. Should Mr. Roosevelt cling tenaciously to his short-cut procedure, when controversy and delay are inevitable under any circumstances, the suspicion that he does not trust the people to make the choice will be unavoidably strengthened.

Six Daring Young Women.

A love for flying through the air with the greatest of ease does not necessarily mean that a girl is a born airplane stewardess. She must also have the attributes of courtesy, poise and an ability to keep her feet on the ground even though her head is in the clouds. Possession of these qualities is bringing the new profession more and more into the news. Undoubtedly, if James Hilton had delayed the writing of his "Lost Horizon" a couple of years, one of his characters on that ill-fated plane would necessarily have been an air hostess.

Thousands of applications for these jobs are on file with every airline company in the country. Imagine the surprise, then, of the American Airlines to receive six resignations recently in as many days.

Were the girls losing their nerve? Did they all suddenly decide that woman's place is on the ground? Had recent accidents convinced them that crackups prevent flying from being what it is cracked up to be? No, a thousand times no, to all these questions. The answer is simply that in the plane a young girl's fancy, etc. They can laugh at danger; endure grouchy and sick passengers; forego femininity for tailored mannish uniforms. But when love came along, each of them took a nose dive.

It is noteworthy that in the cases of four of these girls, it took two pilots and two ground officials to induce them to make a forced landing in order to keep the home beacons burning.

Parents are poor psychologists. They tell the 5-year-old, "A little bird told me," and then wonder what in the world could have possessed him to punch the canary with the fire poker.

A precocious child screen star is entirely capable of coping with any situation. In a news story of an auto accident in which Jane Withers was slightly injured, it was reported, "She sustained a large bump on her head, but laughed it off."

Another thing that makes us so fearful of being injured in traffic is that we might get picked up by an ambulance and killed in the wild dash en route to a hospital.

Threat Of Inflation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I heartily commend your editorials entitled "That Future Crisis" of March 12, and "Easy Money and Inflation" of March 14?

At long last, the fires of inflation are beginning to burn brightly in this country. You can not too often remind our people that it was Mr. Roosevelt and his "economic" advisers who wantonly lit those fires nearly four years ago, that through these four years it was they who nourished the smouldering embers by a succession of inflationary measures, and that it is now they who try to disclaim responsibility for the future conflagration they fear, while they refuse to take steps patently within their powers to check it.

Don't let them get away with it.

France And The U. S.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With all due respect to the excellent diplomacy which prompted the newly-arrived French Ambassador, M. Georges Bonnet, to broadcast to the people of our democratic country, and to assure them of the amicable relations France desires to further with out Nation through trade agreements, the premises of our relationship with a people who have repudiated a debt contracted by them and granted with a willingness and desire that was spontaneous on the part of America in France's hour of need, calls our attention.

The agreed amount of this debt was not even partially reimbursed at the dates promised, although the occasion of the first default was coincident with America's hour of depression and financial misery, and such refusal was flavored not with an element of regret on the part of France, but rather with indignation, at least in the Chamber of Deputies, which represents the will of the people. This is a distasteful situation which even the suavity of advanced diplomacy is unable to obliterate.

The recent oversubscription of the French nation to their government's appeal for a loan for tremendous armaments shows how clearly they see eye to eye when their own personal security is involved, and how eagerly they respond to the call of present sacrifice in order to prevent further greater ones on their part.

A sympathetic mutual understanding between two nations, as even between two persons, is the fruit of a spirit whose quality is revealed more fully by its acts than by its words. PRACTICAL JUSTICE.

"His Own Medicine."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I think the ousting of the Nazi-sympathizing professor from the faculty of the American University is a commendable and praiseworthy act, and would add that any man so inclined has no place in any American institution.

This barbaric and vicious creed that said professor is in accord with has been condemned by the entire civilized world with the exception of two countries, Italy and Japan, and their moral standards can be judged by their recent acts.

I read the letter of protest from the man who called himself "Aristotle," who bewails the curtailment of academic freedom. Now I wonder if this "Aristotle" knows what has happened in Naziland in the last four years. Does he know that academic freedom is dead in Naziland, or does he know of the repudiation of Christianity and all moral principles? Does he know of the burning of most of the world's best literature, the wholesale massacres, the robberies, the persecutions, the glorification of mass murder, the reversion to the ancient Teutonic barbarism? Does he know all of these facts, or has this Greek philosopher just emerged from his tomb? If he does know, why talk about academic freedom to spread such doctrines?

I think this Nazified professor received a dose of his own medicine.

Satirizing The President.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some may look upon the movement among the students of the great universities to satarize the President of the United States and his wife as only the foolish pranks of irresponsible youths, but I see a deeper, if not a sinister, motive behind the enterprise.

It is intended to bring ridicule and disrespect to those who have been chosen by the American people as leaders and who as such are entitled to the respect of the Nation regarless of political affiliations.

I suppose the students, for the most part, are sons "of economic royalists" and Liberty Leaguers, and doubtless get their inspiration from those sources, so one can hardly expect any other course of conduct on their part.

However, if they will spend less time on fool pranks and more time reading history they will find that their attitude is the same that characterized the Bourbons of France 150 years ago and that resulted in the French Revolution which deluged Europe in blood and caused the decapitation of many of the Bourbons, who were totally indifferent to the sufferings and the welfare of the masses.

Those who opposed the present policies of the people think it "can't happen here," but they may wake up some fine day and discover that the people will not always be thwarted by an autocratic industrial oligarchy, and they and their tribe will be the first to suffer, inasmuch as they own most of the wealth of the country.

It would seem that the faculties of the great institutions of learning would be wise enough to discourage such action on the part of the student body, and be able to envision the trend of the times. It might be well for trustees of the various colleges to enlarge their curriculum to include a chair for the teaching of morals, good manners and respect for the constituted authorities of the Nation.

WELLINGTON SMITH.

Washington, March 12.

A Disavowal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A recent communication to your paper from the pen of "Aristotle" has caused me some discomfort and embarrassment. Certain individuals and groups have received the erroneous impression that I was the author of a letter defending the position and the person of Dr. Charles Tansill. Nothing would be farther from my thoughts than to extend aid or favors to individuals or groups representing ideas or political philosophies repugnant to the spirit of American democracy.

In this respect I wish to say that I am, without exceptions, in full agreement with Dr. Charles Tansill's removal from the faculty of American University. I am not concerned with the reasons for his leaving, nor the methods used to remove him from his post. I only know that the presence of a faculty member who openly espoused the cause of German Fascism would in the end have damaged and weakened the name and the purpose of a place of learning dedicated, we assume, to the principles of democracy and academic freedom.

It is with profound regret I witness the name of a fellow-citizen linked with the defense of a colleague who has repudiated those inherent benefits of a Nation dedicated to equality and justice without reservation for class, race or creed. I would not, by word or deed, have my name linked with the defense of Dr. Charles Tansill, who by his own admission is opposed to that very tolerance "Aristotle" hopes to defend. The spirit of America, best exemplified by the sacrifices made by common people and scholars in 1776, asks that we today, do not in the name of tolerance support the representatives of Fascism in America. Upon our defense of academic and political freedom rests the future of this Nation. Tolerance does not ask that we give ourselves to the enemy.

Statistics On Drunkenness Arrests.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The cold unsentimental police blotter statistics to which Marie C. Searles referred in her second letter on prohibition, but which she did not quote, show such results as these:

Arrests for drunkenness in six Illinois cities, having half the State's population, 1931, prohibition, 127,973; 1935, repeal, 57,391; decrease, 70,887. Indiana, 11 cities, 1928, 4,612; 1935, 3,378. Michigan, 23 cities, 1928, 41,059; 1935, 35,389. Ohio, 36 cities, 1928, 62,930; 1935, 36,870. New York, 49 cities having more than two-thirds of the State's population, 1928, 38,446; 1935, 26,834. New Jersey, 19 cities, 1928, 6,829; 1935, 4,237.

These same cities show an average decrease in arrests for drunken driving of 35 per cent. For example, in Chicago in 1927, there were 1,947 arrests for drunken driving, and in 1935, 735. Average arrests for drunken driving for the entire prohibition period was 1,267, for the beer and repeal period, 696.

Regardless of all the talk of excessive drinking among women, police records show very few arrests for drunkenness. The Commissioner of Correction of the State of New York reported that 4,619 women were arrested for drunkenness in 1931, prohibition, and 4,028 in 1935, repeal. These are the only complete State records available on this subject. The 49 New York cities reporting on arrests for drunkenness showed 1,590 women arrested for that cause in 1928 and 1,128 in 1935. A group of Pennsylvania cities having more than half the State's population showed 393 arrests of women for drunkenness in 1928 and 480 in 1935. In St. Louis, 1,728 women were arrested for drunkenness in 1927, and 1,184 in 1935.

Wherever anything like complete records of the "cold unsentimental police statistics" are obtainable they show generally decided improvement in the matter of arrests for drunkenness, drunken driving, and arrests of women and youth for drunkenness since repeal. There are a few exceptions, of course.

If women are drinking to excess—as the professional drys are trying to make us believe—the police records show no evidence of it.

The principal difference between the prohibition and repeal eras is that during prohibition women did their drinking behind the closed doors of the speakeasies and they now do it openly. If prohibition women get any satisfaction out of slandering their sex let them stick to facts.

In the hope that women would vote for prohibition the drys insisted upon giving them equal suffrage. And now, because some women exercise their rights to enjoy the amenities of life, the very people who were most insistent upon granting them these rights are now trying to convince the public that the women are going to hell and damnation. Women are not doing any such thing. Most of those who are not working for their own living are at home soberly and capably performing their family and social duties as upright and decent mothers and citizens. I resent all the slander that is being heaped upon them by the dry groups whose misguided efforts are largely responsible for whatever drinking there is among women.

Polly's Day.

"There's not a mile in Ireland's Isle where the dirty vermin musters;
Where'er he put his dear forefoot
he murdered them in clusters.
The toads went hop, the frogs went flop, slap dash into the water,
And the beast committed suicide to save themselves from slaughter . . .

The Wicklow Hills are very high,
and so's the Hill of Houth, sir;
But there's a hill much higher still
—ay, higher than them both,
sir;
'Twas on the top of this high hill
St. Patrick preached the sarmint
That drove the hogs into the bogs and bothered all the varmint."

Whether or not St. Patrick actually drove the snakes from Ireland cannot be settled by the aid of history, though this supposed event seems to be Patrick's chief claim to immortality.

Legends have outlasted the facts. There appears to be no evidence, for example, to show whether March 17 was the occasion of Patrick's birth or of his death. On the contrary, both the date and place of his birth remain matters of uncertainty and dispute. Indeed, because of the many conflicting stories that have been circulated, it is now believed that there were actually two or more Patricks whom the storytellers conveniently rolled into the one heroic figure.

* * * *

Wherever he went through Ireland, so legend says, St. Patrick was invariably preceded by a drum, the noise serving to attract the people from far and wide, after which Patrick would deliver a stirring sermon. It is quite possible, too, that Patrick may have whacked the drum himself, now and then.

On one occasion, just before beginning the discourse that was to finish off the snakes, the drum was beaten so vigorously that it burst. The crowds of people, who had assembled to witness the miracle, had an idea that most of Patrick's strange power lay in the drum, and they were therefore considerably disappointed — particularly so because a large snake was noticed "gliding down the hill with his jaws distended, a leer in his ugly eyes and a tremor in his whole body as if it were convulsed with laughter." But luckily, so the story continues, at that moment an angel appeared, patched the drum until it was as good as new, the sermon was delivered according to schedule, and the reptiles took to the tall timber.

The Latin name of Patricius, meaning "a patrician," could easily have been applied to any Christian theologian of aristocratic descent. A reasonable conjecture is that there was one central figure around whom the many stories tended to group themselves. This, very likely, was the Patrick, a bishop in later life, who wrote several tracts (one of which was his own "Confession") and who seems to have been born in the village of Nempthur, Ireland, A. D. 386, not far from Glastonbury—though another story gives Tours, France, as the birthplace.

Where so much is clouded with uncertainty, a considerable amount of reputable evidence testifies to the educational and religious accomplishments of Bishop Patrick. It appears that he was not only a religious leader, but a statesman as well. The scope of his labors is indicated by the statement that he "founded 365 churches in Ireland and planted a school by the side of each," even establishing one or two colleges.

Bishop Patrick, too, seems to have thoroughly understood the value of adapting prevailing superstitious beliefs and bending them to his own purposes. For instance, one of his early much-discussed deeds was to light a fire on the Hill of Slane, thus setting up opposition to a Druidic fire on the Hill of Tara. Being a better hand at fire-making, Patrick secured a solid support in that particular neighborhood.

Among other events of his life, as mentioned in his "Confession," he was kidnaped by pirates when he was 16, and sold into slavery. After a life variously estimated at anywhere from 88 to 122 years, Bishop Patrick died at Saul, near Downpatrick, being buried in the abbey of Downpatrick—certainly an appropriate coincidence of name.

The few records that are available that the three-leaved shamrock, worn and displayed throughout the world on March 17, has a special significance since Bishop Patrick, in his sermons, constantly endeavored to explain the doctrine of the Trinity by pointing to the shamrock's three leaves growing from one stem as a symbol of the confusing mystery.

* * * *

Perhaps Bishop Patrick did not drive the snakes from Ireland. But the fact remains that such a person existed, even though his accomplishments may have been of a somewhat less spectacular nature. Some of his spectacular deeds and bardic splendors have, no doubt, been swept into the dust heap of forgetfullness. Yet so much remains that this half-legendary figure, kept green in the world's memory by millions of lapel-worn shamrocks, has come to stand for the unquenchable spirit of the Irish and the romantic luster of the Emerald Isle.

Breeding For Cash.

I HAVE BEEN trying to imagine what would happen in this country if we had a Mussolini of our own and he were to issue a decree like the one which the Duce nonchalantly let fly at the Italian people a few days ago with regard to the propagation of the breed. For several years Mussolini gave wedding bounties and baby bonuses to his subjects to stimulate the production of Italians, an adaption of the speed-up system which organized labor heartily deplores in industrial life.

He constantly harangued the people on the subject of population, holding that if there were not many more Italians the time would come when there would be no Italians because a numerically small nation could not stand off its enemies. Then, a little over a year ago, he justified his gallant defensive war against the Abyssinians in a land 3,000 miles away on the ground that Italy was overpopulated and had to expand or bust.

There seemed to be a slight inconsistency in this, but one of the advantages which a dictator enjoys is his immunity to embarrassing questions.

• • • •

NOW THAT ITALY has expanded into Abyssinia, the Duce again is demanding more Italians, and this time he doesn't say "please," but applies financial pressure. The bachelors' tax has been increased and married couples are required to breed, if possible, failing which their possessions will be seized by the state upon their death. There seems to be a serious invasion of the private life of the Italian citizen in this decree, and a descent to the raw realities of the barnyard. But worse than that there is a question concerning the souls of the Italians who are to be produced merely as tax exemptions and for revenue only.

A human being whose original reason for being may be computed in an exact number of lire, which is a 6-cent Italian coin, seems somehow less human than one who occurred in the natural course of events, and I wonder what God's policy is toward persons bred for the purpose of killing other human beings, or as brood-stock to produce still more killers.

For the Duce's purpose is plain in this respect. He has staked out on the map of Africa the countries which are to be conquered by these bundles from heaven who will be trained from infancy in the arts of killing, and they come into the world with the mission of killing or, in the case of the girls, of producing killers.

That much is plain. I am not an expert on the subject of souls, but I have to roll my own thoughts on the subject, because there is something terrible about the reasoning of anyone holding expert credentials who would justify this procedure in the name of God.

• • • •

GOD NEVER MADE any specific expression covering this particular case. To justify it thus would strike me as akin to those distortions of old rulings of the Supreme Court to cover special cases unforeseen when the rulings were made. I doubt that God so intended or that the blessings inherent in propagation were intended for those who breed for a cash consideration.

According to the Duce's code the highest honors of citizenship are accorded persons whose motives seem most sordid, and whose other talents in life may be no asset to the state.

And an unusually prolific pair of Italians without any other virtue may presently accumulate enough credit for their achievements in this line to retire to the stud, as it were, and live in state like Man o' War and the mares of the Blue Grass country.

This may be all right in Italy under Fascism. They do have some curious ideas by comparison with ours on certain phases of life, and perhaps we have no right to criticize, but only to observe and, possibly, if it isn't an intrusion, to comment.

But, after all, is that any way for a man to make a living?

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The President Goes Fishing.

The scene is the deck of the Presidential yacht. Mr. Roosevelt has been fishing for some time without a bit and is a bit nettled.

President—What's the matter with these fish, anyhow?

Skipper—They'll bite, I think. It requires patience.

President—Patience! In times like these?

• • • •

(About 15 minutes more elapse without a nibble.)

President—You don't suppose it could be the bait, do you?

Skipper—The bait?

President—Yes; I mean it isn't too old for efficiency?

Skipper—I think not.

President—What test line are we using?

Skipper—It's 70 test.

President—Seventy! How that word pursues me!

• • • •

Skipper—I'm sure there are plenty of fish here.

President—If they think they can outwait me they have another guess. I have JUST BEGUN TO FISH!

• • • •

Skipper—Fish are funny. I've known 'em to be all around and not bite for four or five days at a time.

President—We will not wait four or five days! We will not wait four or five hours! We will not wait four or five minutes. We will not WAIT AT ALL!

• • • •

(Another 15 minutes elapse.)

President—I suppose I could abandon this; but, John, I have one ambition.

Skipper—My name is not John.

President—That's all right; I call everybody John. John, as I was saying, I have one ambition.

Skipper—What is it, Mr. President?

President—When this fishing trip is over I don't want to hand the fishing situation to my successor the way Coolidge handed it to Buchanan . . . or was it Hoover?

(A little later.)

President—These are very ignorant fish. One-third of them are ill-fed and ill-nourished and yet they won't bite.

Skipper—Maybe they don't know they are ill-fed.

President—Ah, I have it! I'll give them one of my fireside chats. Where's the microphone?

Skipper—There is no microphone aboard.

President—Why wasn't I notified?

Skipper—A microphone isn't necessary for fishing, sir.

President—My boy, a microphone is necessary for everything! Is there a diver aboard?

Skipper—Yes sir.

President—Send him overboard at once. Time is the essence. Our counsel is the counsel of courage.

Skipper—It'll take about ten minutes.

President—Not ten minutes! Not ten seconds! Now! And have him notify those fish.

Skipper—About what, sir?

President—That I'm not just fishing for fun . . . I HAVE A MANDATE!

Do You Remember—

Away back when you would speak of an income tax and have everybody ask if some countries really had to stand for them?

The Public And The Supreme Court Proposal

Hamilton View Criticized As 'Aristocratic'

Reader Argues Convention Of 1787 Set Limit On Supreme Court.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In your issue of March 11, editorially discussing the "fireside chat" of the President, touching his recommendation to Congress on the Supreme Court, you quote from one of Alexander Hamilton's letters in the Federalist.

The Federalist is the compilation of a series of letters written by John Jay, James Madison and Alexander Hamilton for a New York newspaper, designed to influence public opinion in the States, for the purpose of securing the adoption of the Federal Constitution.

It must be recalled, however, that Mr. Hamilton was not in sympathy with the Democratic processes set forth in that instrument.

At the very outset of the convention of 1787 he advanced an outline for a Federal Constitution, which was so un-democratic as to cause its immediate rejection by the delegates.

Mr. Hamilton was an intellectual aristocrat who did not believe in popular government—had such an aversion for it, indeed, that he was identified with the movement to make Gen. Washington king.

The quotation you cite from Mr. Hamilton's pen is as follows: "A constitution is in fact, and must be regarded by the judges as, a fundamental law. It therefore belongs to them (the courts) to ascertain its meaning, as well as the meaning of any particular act proceeding from the legislative body. (So far so good).

"If there should happen to be an irreconcilable variance between the two, that which has the superior obligation and validity ought of course be preferred; or, in other words, the Constitution ought to be preferred to the statute."

Here again we find Mr. Hamilton's distrust of popular government so chronic that he is deliberately advocating a veto of Congressional acts without constitutional authority stipulated in the creation of the judicial power.

This is the very thing which was vigorously attacked by Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson, Abraham Lincoln, Robert M. La Follette, sr., and which drove Theodore Roosevelt in 1912 to advocate the recall of judges and of judicial decisions by popular referendum.

It must also be recalled that for nearly two centuries the people of the United States had lived under the English judicial system, powerless to invalidate the acts of Parliament. The overwhelming proof that they did not intend to confer this abortive power upon our courts is immediately seen in the fact that four times during the deliberations of the convention resolutions were offered giving the Supreme Court judicial review of the acts of Congress and four times voted down. (See the Madison Papers).

The Constitution, after conferring a limited original jurisdiction upon the Supreme Court, states that it shall also have appellate jurisdiction in "all cases arising in law and equity," etc., with "such exceptions and regulations as the Congress may impose."

I maintain that under this Congressional power stipulated clearly in the great instrument, Congress can prevent the lower courts from entertaining suits involving the validity of acts of Congress.

The act could also stipulate impeachment proceedings against any judicial officer violating the act.

Delay Of Amendment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It is no answer to say that the decision so effectively rendered at the November election was not a decision, at least not conclusive, and that the issue must be referred back to the 48 States. Such reference wouldn't be to "the people," but to the Legislatures, with all their horse-trading proclivities—of which specific examples could be mentioned, of 1937 vintage.

And, as suggested, even if approval of these Legislatures were obtained this year, how long would it be before the enactment of the conflicting, often advantage-seeking legislation of the States could be ironed out, or possibly, thrown out, by the courts? Few today doubt the necessity for, or the wisdom of the child labor amendment, but it is still unratified, and one or two Legislatures have refused ratification. Should ratificatoin of the Borah, or any other, amendment to the Constitution take as long, the courts wouldn't get the new questionnaires until the second generation, and we might be sitting on the doorstep with Haile Selassie's grandson waiting for an answer.

Isn't the whole program of opposition one of delay in the hope that public opinion will be lullabied into more conservative expression through the medium, possibly, of a restored prosperity? And doesn't delay spell "danger" as vividly as "top of the world" conditions in 1929?

'Dr. Roosevelt.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Four years ago our country (my adopted country, for I was born in the Philippine Islands) was on the brink of despair. Nobody knew what to do and if one did that one did not dare to do it. Then Mr. Roosevelt appeared on the horizon. He was like a doctor to a sick man, or a harbor to a storm-tossed sailor. We were a sick people, a very sick people indeed!

Today we are well. We are prosperous. We are confident. We seem to forget Mr. Roosevelt, just as a man who was cured forgets all about his doctor until he gets sick again. When we were sick we looked up to Dr. Roosevelt to help us. The Supreme Court is today a very sick institution. And Dr. Roosevelt has diagnosed its case and prescribed the remedy that he honestly believed will put it on its feet. So why not give this remedy a trial at least and see what happens. Let us put our shoulders together behind the President in his effort to reorganize the Supreme Court.

How Dictators Arise.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The sophistry of the arguments being advanced against the President's proposed Supreme Court change must be apparent to all thinking readers.

Acknowledging that the President's objectives are good (it would be a hardy publicist who would openly oppose relieving the condition of agriculture, of labor and of the unemployed), the argument is advanced that, if the three divisions of Government were to work together instead of at cross-purposes, our Federal form of Government would in some mysterious way disappear. The statement that the Supreme Court has never, in any way, attempted to "claim" powers which are not inherent in its position as a "balance wheel" is historically inaccurate, unless one is to assume that a balance wheel is one whose function is to keep the other two from turning.

The President answered his critics so well the other night that there is, indeed, very little left to be said. The argument which has frightened some of his friends—that, if his proposals were granted, some Huey Long would in the future turn it to his own advantage—does not, of course, hold water. Dictators arise, as present-day history shows, when democracy fails to function. Those who claim that democracy functions now, with one-third of the population in need and people starving at our own doorstep, as the report of the Family Welfare Association in Washington so well testifies, are either blind or they write with the tongue in the cheek.

Your editorial of March 11 quotes Alexander Hamilton with apparent approval. But the people have demonstrated in the past three elections that they prefer the philosophy of Thomas Jefferson to that of Hamilton. After all, the wishes of the people are, or they should be, the court of last resort.

"Stand Back Of Court."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The Supreme Court is not at fault for the darn fool schemes and wasteful spending of this Administration. The people of the United States should be thankful that we have such wonderful men in our Supreme Court to look after our Nation's problems.

The trouble is not the Supreme Court but the Administration in power. Let us all stand back of our Supreme Court.

C. W. C.

"The Real Question."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The real question at issue before the Nation today is not the liberalization of the Supreme Court by augmentation or the restriction of its power by amendment to the Constitution, but the re-distribution of power between the States and the Federal Government. The proposal of President Roosevelt and the several amendments suggested by his opponents are, alike, but temporary makeshifts, which may have to do "till the real thing comes along."

Westbrook Pegler compares the States into which the United States is divided to the counties into which each State is divided as the negligible units of government. Though the analogy does not run on all fours, yet it points the modern trend in efficient government everywhere throughout the world.

The Federal Government, in fact and reality, does not derive its power from its constituent States any more than the sun is controlled by the planets which revolve about it. A circle may have a hundred sectors, but one center. The seat and source of Federal power must reside in Washington, and not in 48 State capitals.

KELLY MILLER.

"Political Suicide."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Why all this talk about packing the Supreme Court and why not more talk about unpacking it?

As it now stands, anyone who wants to be fair about it will agree that it is certainly packed to a finish and has developed into a scrictly one-man court, with the Chief Justice holding absolutely the balance of power.

Every one knows exactly how the conservative bloc in the court has voted and will continue to vote on every single issue that has been before them since the present Administration has been in power, so how can anyone expect them to make a change of any kind?

Those of the Democratic Party who are taking the opposite part in this controversy cannot possibly find a more sure way of committing political suicide than by continuing in their present line of argument.

GRAHAM WILSON,

"Who Misses NRA?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I am heartily sick of reading letters concerning the Supreme Court question, where readers keep harping on the fact that the President received 27,000,000 votes. These readers go on to say that since they voted for the President, everyone should be in favor of anything he proposes.

A lot of people did not vote for Mr. Roosevelt and many who did vote for him did so because they simply liked him better than they did Mr. Landon, but did not approve of everything that the President has been trying to do.

My idea of the Supreme Court is that it is a body of men who are qualified to give a fair and impartial opinion on important questions that come up before them. Also that they stand in the way of crazy legislation that might be put through by a hysterical Congress or a misguided President. The Supreme Court is the only body in this country that I have any faith in and if it is to be packed with agreeable gentlemen, it may as well be scrapped entirely.

President Roosevelt has had over four years to get things going and has spent millions upon millions. He is now back where he started and is now trying to place the blame on somebody else. Who misses the NRA and AAA now? Nobody. And it is the same thing with the others of his pet schemes.

"Just Plain Dumb."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

We've been saying for years that Mr. Roosevelt was smart. We've admired him for his cleverness in managing Congress and the Democratic Party and about 27,000,000 people—getting them all to let him have his own way.

But his Supreme Court plan wasn't so smart. Really, it was just plain dumb—both in conception and in inception. I don't like bungling—especially when it is the Chief Executive of 130,000,000 people who bungles.

DEMOCRATIC ADMIRER.
Washington, March 12.

'Mandate' Of November Variously Construed By Readers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Herewith is a layman's reaction to the President's speech of March 4:

He is undermining the very foundations of democracy. He is repudiating the "checks and balances." He is setting the people against the very institutions that protect their liberties. He is calling some of the best and wisest of honored men of the Nation "defeatest lawyers" because they do not fall in with his plans, good and bad. He is paving the way for a future President (whose desire for good may not exist) to have the power to perpetrate bad deeds if he and his henchmen will it.

That crying wrongs are still to be righted, who would deny? But can a wrong be cured by a greater wrong—the loss of the protection afforded by the calm wisdom of our Supreme Court justices? The three-horses-and-plow simile was a nefarious one. Rather say, must we set out with all sails spread, and yet take no ropes, no anchor, no rudder, to guide and control the Ship of State in untracked seas? This is what he asks us to do.

He proclaims his own infallibility; his plans are the best and must be put through. No one man is infallible!

The President's speech left no shadow of doubt. He is not a friend of the Constitution. He does not put liberty ahead of death and starvation. Between two ills he chooses the greater ill—loss of freedom. He would stand as a benefactor, but is revealed as a destroyer! He wishes, by his own simile of horses and plow to use the court for his purposes. Thus he would undo its very reason for being. It is the people's court. Let them say if it is to be abolished!

L. K. S.
Aldie, Va., March 10.

"Point Of Dislocation."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Mr. Roosevelt is profoundly correct when he stated in his "Fireside Chat" that the United States Government has been sadly dislocated; his error was in the point of dislocation.

This dislocation was initiated when Mr. Roosevelt demanded and received from Congress, in his first week of office in 1933, extraordinary and dictatorial powers such as no President ever had except in time of war. Armed with these, dislocation was materially hastened and accentuated by a steady flow from the White House of executive orders—hundreds of them—which were, in fact, imperial decrees having the full force and effect of law.

Then followed the dislocation of our currency by the abrogation of the gold basis and the repudiation of the sacred contract of the Government as expressed in its gold bonds. Then followed the complete dislocation of industry, commerce and agriculture through regimentation under the NRA and the AAA.

Retire At 60.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

If the Supreme Court justices have the country's interest at heart, as they should have, it seems to me they would retire at the age of 60 years without being asked. Anyone with a thinking mind knows that after they reach that age and older they are not capable of carrying on business in the proper way. Not that I disregard age in any way. I respect age. But I am judging by myself. I am now 58 years old, but I am sure my mind is not as clear as it was a few years ago.

If the court is going to rule the country why have a President and Senate? I think to have the Supreme Court for life was all right in ox-cart days, but not in this day and time.

I surely hope the people will rally to and support the President. For myself, I am 100 per cent for the President.

"The Purpose Of His Plan."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The first step in a governmental revolution is the creation of distrust and contempt for the old. With this in mind, we may readily understand the unprecedented attack of the Administration upon the constitutional law of the country and the courts whose function it has been to enforce the law.

The President said that he reached his conclusions by the process of elimination. So may we; and having eliminated the constitutional law of the country, and the judicial power to protect the people from irreparable damage, we can clearly see the purpose of his plan—to entangle the people within the meshes of a dictatorship from which there would be no escape.

A VIRGINIA DEMOCRAT.

New Court Plan.

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir:

My proposal is to amend the Constitution of the United States in regard to the establishment of a Supreme Court.

Establish a Supreme Court of the United States consisting of nine justices. In the first setup of the court the nine justices should be appointed as follows: One for two years, one for four years, one for six years, one for eight years, one for ten years, one for 12 years, one for 14 years, one for 16 years and one for 18 years. Thereafter, all the justices of the Supreme Court of the United States should be appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate for a term of 18 years or during good behavior. If any justice shall die, resign or be removed during his term of office, his successor shall be appointed to fill the remainder of his unexpired term. All the justices must retire when their term of office expires, or in any event upon reaching the age of 70 years, which retirement shall be at full pay.

The above method would inject new blood into the court every two years, and every President, if he served a full term of office, would appoint at least two justices to the Supreme Court of the United States, and if he should serve two terms, he would have the privilege of appointing, with the advice and consent of the Senate, at least a minority of that court. This gradual change in the complexion of the court, in my humble judgment, would tend to promote a better feeling between the court and the other two branches of the Government, as well as the people.

RICHARD E. WELLFORD.
Washington, March 13.

In The Days Of 1927-28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Mr. Roosevelt's insistence on having "young blood" in the Supreme Court brings to mind the days of 1927-28 when the newspapers were carrying glowing accounts of the daring doings of a group of younger bankers who had recently assumed leadership in some of the larger financial institutions in the country.

Events which lead up to the banking crisis of 1932-33 proved beyond a doubt that the "oldsters" had been right in their contention that the policies of the "young blood" bankers had been unsound and that the country would have been much better off if the advice of the old fellows had been followed and the rules of conservative banking strictly adhered to.

With this example taken from such recent history, what assurance have we that "young blood" injected in the Supreme Court will actually improve conditions? As a matter of fact, the reverse may be true. Let us hope the American people will stop, look and listen before turning the Court over to what may prove to be a young wrecking crew.

Mandate's Cost.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

President Roosevelt has been criticized for telling his friends that he had a mandate from the people to select the men for judges of the Supreme Court who would declare any law passed by his Congress constitutional.

Now, can you blame him for setting great store by this mandate? It came high and cost him, or rather the Government, over four billion dollars—a lot of money even in these days—a lot of taxes.

Democrat Sees Challenge For Party Honesty

'Disillusioned' Looked For No Hidden Meanings In Platform.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I am neither an "economic royalist" nor a "defeatist lawyer," but a lifelong Democrat who has consistently supported the party—but only because I believed in its principles and its candidates. Moreover, I took great pleasure in voting for the President last November, because I sincerely believed in his humanitarian objectives. I still believe in them. But I do not believe in reaching those objectives by packing the Supreme Court.

Such a scheme, to my mind, carries with it not only a serious threat to American institutions but a distinct challenge to the honesty of the Democratic Party. Packing a court is morally indefensible under any circumstances. Furthermore, a most dangerous precedent would be set and the Supreme Court reduced to the status of a political football. Give the President a subservient Supreme Court, with a rubber stamp Congress, and gone is our American system of checks and balances; and with it goes, let no one forget, that protection which our system throws around minority religious and racial groups in times of widespread hysteria and prejudice.

The President's recent speeches were appealing and adroit, but for me, at least, old magic just didn't work. After they were finished, the arguments of the opposition still stood unanswered. The President blandly ignored the evidence that there is no congestion on the docket of the Supreme Court and that he, himself, has failed to fill vacancies existing in the lower courts. In fact it seems to be tacitly admitted that this line of argument was merely intended as sugar coating for the court packing pill.

Nor has the President definitely explained what emergency now exists which did not exist when the Democratic platform, promising a "clarifying amendment" to the Constitution, was adopted. It is true the President assured us in the "fireside chat" that the packing plan was in the platform all the time—that we just didn't notice it. I, for one, am frank to confess that I did not look for any hidden meanings in the platform. And certainly the President was very careful during his campaign not to give the public the slightest hint that the platform didn't mean just what it seemed to mean.

DISILLUSIONED DEMOCRAT.

Italy's War

By Barnet Nover

Should The Madrid Offensive Fail.

THERE IS NO longer the slightest doubt that the spearpoint of the latest rebel offensive against Madrid is an Italian army, equipped with Italian weapons and led by Italian officers.

Gen. Franco, it is reported, is also being aided in the present drive on the Spanish capital by Germans, Portuguese and other "volunteers" from Fascist states as well as by Moors, foreign legionnaires, Carlists, etc. But the non-Italian elements on the rebel side are at the moment playing a subsidiary role; the war in Spain is now dominantly Mussolini's war.

So clear is this that there now seems to be no reason why Italy, as much a belligerent as it was when it began its invasion of Ethiopia, should not be regarded as coming within the scope and meaning of the neutrality act.

• • • •

FOUR MONTHS ago when the Spanish insurgents reached the Manzanares River it seemed only a matter of days before the capital would be taken by Gen. Franco. But at the fifty-ninth minute of the eleventh hour a miracle occurred.

With the aid of an international Socialist legion that arrived at Madrid in the very nick of time, the government forces were able to hold their lines intact. The city was saved. And despite a succession of later attempts by the rebels to storm the gates of the capital and a continuous air bombardment which has reduced the city to a shambles, Madrid has continued to hold out. Now a new offensive against the capital has been launched, this time from the north. Apparently, Mussolini believes the Malaga adventure can be repeated.

The dispatches from the Guadalajara front are confused. As usual, both sides have been lavish in their claims of victory. The evidence, however, indicates that while the Italian forces at first made considerable progress in their drive, they have now been halted. Whether this new stalemate is only temporary or not remains to be seen. Even Gen. Miaja, generalissimo of the government forces, has seen fit to warn his troops that the fight is far from over. Gen. Franco, or rather Mussolini, may yet take Madrid.

CERTAINLY the Duce will let no scruples intervene to rob him of his victory. But if the non-intervention agreement is honestly carried out, Mussolini will perforce have to depend on the Italian troops already on Spanish soil to do the trick. If that army of his now concentrated north of Guadalajara fails him, the jig will be up for Franco and his wire-pullers.

In this connection certain isolated reports coming out of the fighting area may prove of very great significance. The Italian prisoners captured by the loyalists and interviewed by American journalists have testified that they and many of their compatriots now serving under Franco's banner are there through no will of their own. Ostensibly recruited for service in Ethiopia, they were, without their knowledge and presumably without their consent, sent to Spain.

Spain, Ethiopia—it is probably all the same to the Duce. The maneuvers of the Italian armies are to him counters in the game of world power. Yet Spain is not Ethiopia, a fact which the pawns of Mussolini are now beginning to discover. Not only in its physical aspects but in the moral climate in which the fighting is taking place does the Italian invasion of east Africa differ markedly from the Italian invasion of the Iberian peninsula.

• • • •

IN ETHIOPIA the Italian soldiers at least had the satisfaction of believing, whether correctly or not is immaterial, that the land they were engaged in conquering would be a land Italy would govern and Italians would settle. With the aid of bombing planes and poison gas the Italian army in Ethiopia made relatively short work of the stubborn but ineffective resistance of the tribesmen.

Spain, however, is not a land to colonize and it is not a land easily ruled. Except for the professional-soldier type in the ranks of the Italian invading force, few of the Black Shirt troops in Spain can have much real enthusiasm for the struggle. And they are beginning to discover that it is one thing fighting a primitive foe lacking all modern war equipment and something else again fighting an enemy who can give as well as take. The Italians in Spain are now being subjected to what may be called the propaganda of hard facts. It may have a devastating effect on their state of mind.

IT IS A well-known phenomenon that organisms, human or otherwise, that have been kept in too sterile an atmosphere are the first to succumb when thrust into a normal environment.

These Italian soldiers now fighting on the rebel side in Spain are now learning that there is a world of reality from which they were excluded while in their homeland. They were there filled with the idea that Fascist Italy was invincible. The Ethiopian war, Great Britain's backdown, the failure of the League's sanctions policy—these and other developments were all capitalized to inflate the Black Shirt ego.

But if the defenders of Madrid do succeed in fighting off the latest besieging army? Then it is clear the balloon of Fascist pretensions would be pricked beyond possibility of rehabilitation. And already the testimony of the Italian soldiers taken prisoners by the loyalists shows that this process is beginning to take place.

• • • •

VERY LIKELY disaffection in Italian ranks is at present more potential than actual. The fighting in the Guadalajara zone has not yet reached its decisive stage. But if the Italian invaders fail, the repercussions, so far as Fascist Italy are concerned, may be of a peculiarly unpleasant kind.

For these 30,000 or 40,000 or 50,000 Italians, whatever the actual number really is, have friends and relatives in Italy. Sooner or later the latter will learn what is going on in Spain. A Fascist regime is powerful enough to stamp out truth, but no regime is powerful enough to stamp out rumor.

No doubt Mussolini is calculating on the opiate of victory to ease the irritations of those he ordered to Spain. But if there is no victory? Dictatorships can survive many serious difficulties—increasing economic distress, financial crises, a great variety of grumbling by the intimidated population. But it cannot survive military defeat. Because of this, the importance to the world of the fighting now taking place near Guadalajara may prove enormous.

Woodchuck

By William Lyon Phelps

On The Table.

Well, I certainly started something when I said in this column a few weeks ago that I was probably the only living person who had eaten woodchuck. Letters have come in to me from many places in the United States of America, and they are so interesting I wish I could print them all. Here are a few:

Some of my correspondents ate woodchuck a great many years ago. It seems to aid longevity as well as levity.

Mrs. Grant Shepherd, of La Plata, Md., ate a small section of the hind leg in 1888. It was near Aquone, in the mountains of North Carolina. "It was the same color and consistency of my father's old leather belt. It tasted exactly like wild goats smell."

Willis N. Parker, of Philadelphia, together with his brother, ate woodchuck and "are still living." They liked it. He tells me that many years ago a minister was coming to a village to preach and he saw a boy digging in a field. Upon inquiry, it appeared he was digging for a woodchuck. "Think you'll get him?" "Gosh! I've got to git him! Minister's coming to our house today." He was the boy.

• • • •

Mrs. Georgie Scribner, of Santee, Calif., ate some woodchuck 68 years ago. "I have never eaten any wild meat I did not like, and I have eaten a lot."

A. B. Bryson, of Fort Worth, Tex., whose mother had "Mrs. Owen's Cook Book," published in Little Rock, Ark., 1888, quotes from it: "In Pennsylvania . . . are called ground-hogs and esteemed a great delicacy."

Value of Accessories to Complement Spring Costumes Stressed in Fashion Study

They Are Only Rivals Of the Suit You Buy

Survey of Styles at New York Source Brings Many Hints on Dressing for Busy Women; Choice of Jewelry Important Factor.

The Post's fashion editor, who recently studied spring styles at their source, the New York merchandise markets and fashion openings, is giving Washington women practical advice on the clothes-buying problem in a series of articles. Today she discusses what to wear with the spring suit.

By Ethel Ehlen.
Post Fashion Editor.

YOUR SUIT may have as many personalities as the accessories which you choose to complement it. And, since the entire spring season revolves around suits, accessories are of paramount importance in your wardrobe. The best-groomed women are buying several suits this season—each in a different interpretation of the latest suit vogue, or softly tailored suits in an interesting array of color tones. Whatever you decide, remember, that the only rivals of the suits this season are the accessories that accompany them on various occasions.

For the busy woman who must dash from office to luncheon, to club meetings, to tea, and thence to dinner, the basic suit with numerous and varied accesory changes, is just about the most practical costume she can have in her wardrobe. Whether it is softly tailored or of the mannish tailored type, it can be transformed in a trice, from a perfect business costume, to something quite appropriate for an important luncheon. How is this done—there are numerous solutions to the problem. For instance, a sweater blouse, which by the way, is considered tremendously important in the fashion picture this spring, is ideal for the office, shopping and the like.

Sweaters Are Important.

Long or short-sleeved sweaters, in lovely tones which either harmonize or contrast with the suit, are much in evidence wherever smartly-attired women gather. In the same category are softly tailored blouses of silks, cottons or linens, and pique weskits. For dressier occasions, there are blouses of various materials with bows, buttons, jabots, lace frills, unique yoke treatments; in white or high fashion hues and tints. This category includes blouses of the lingerie-touch variety, which give a feminine touch to a tailored suit. Simple blouses of silk or linen are given a festive air by the addition of brightly-colored triangle scarfs, tucked under the collar, or worn in lieu of a collar when the blouse is thus styled. Pockets and scallops; high necklines finished with perky bows; lowered necklines; cascading frills, are other tremendous trifles on blouses which transform a classic suit into something quite feminine and lovely.

Regardless of the type of blouse, this season's interpretation means styling whose goal is a slim silhouette. If the affair is an over-blouse, it is deftly shaped, tucked or gored to accent the waistline. The same is true of the blouse which tucks in under the skirt band. The general picture is to give the illusion of a slenderized costume, rather than a badly assembled skirt and blouse which cuts the figure and destroys continuity of line. Chiffons and laces, made with bows, frills, novelty fastenings and such, give a bit of froth and formality to any springtime suit. The gilet in either tailored or frilly versions is a "must" in every well-planned accessory wardrobe.

Use of Jewelry.

Costume jewelry dresses up any type of suit or accessory. Pearls or clips (rhinestone or composition) add chic and femininity to both sweater and tailored blouses. Massive bracelets that are barbaric in theme, or dangling rhinestone wrist decorations, add character to an otherwise simple tailored suit. Real jewel necklaces, particularly coral and turquoise, are sponsored by authorities as smart accents for suits when wearing sweaters. Rhinestone clips worn on each lapel of the suit jacket are also much in evidence; or, an exotic rhinestone clip on one lapel only is also considered ultra-smart.

Chintz Evening Bags.

Paris (AP). — Cinderella glazed-chintz has stepped out in the role of evening bag material. She is glorified for her new job by quilting—done in gold thread—and a jewel-set gold frame. One of the loveliest bags seen here has a pale yellow background sprinkled with small red sprigs of flowers.

A striking rayon-sheer blouse in tailored styling, featuring a high-tie neck, line, new front yoke-effect and cleverly cuffed sleeves.

Even the most tailored suit may be glamorous this spring. The cascading lace jabot, and glittering rhinestone pin for the lapel, shown above, quickly transform the suit for afternoon wear.

Sweaters add a swank note to spring suits; for color contrast or harmony.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

UP TO NOW the matter of breaking into any branch of the fashion has been almost as hit or miss and helter-skelter as getting into the newspaper business, and two of our cleverest and most alert style experts decided to do something about it. So Miss Tobe, fashion consultant to 100 of the Nation's finest stores, and Julia Coburn, lately fashion editor of one of the biggest magazines, put their smart heads together.

ALICE HUGHES.

Out of the confabs has come something new and valuable—the School for Fashion Careers. Enrollment will begin April 1 at the school's new Rockefeller Center headquarters for the September term, which will last 36 weeks. One or two-year courses will be offered, at an annual fee of $700. Girls must be 21 and high school graduates, with either two years of college or of practical work in a related field. Every field of the fashion business will be taught by local and visiting professors of high rank, and the students will get practical experience in New York and in others of the stores serviced by Miss Tobe.

This is the first school of its kind in history and should do remarkable things in filling good jobs all over the country with able girls. The two lady founders are leaders in the field. The school prospectus will be out April 1, and I'll get my copy early.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Sure, today's a great day on Fifth avenue! New York's St. Patrick's Day parade is one of the thrillers of the year with the avenue jammed and big white livery horses backing into the crowd; and the old "Fighting 69th" Irish regiment leading the procession as its band plays the regimental air of "Garry Owen," and kids getting lost and shamrocks in each lapel, and the venerable cardinal-archbishop reviewing the the whole show from the front porch of his cathedral at Fiftieth street! The Easter parade is much more important in my business, but today's is more fun! . . .

Ethel Barrymore Colt, daughter of Ethel the Great, is on her own, I find. Just opening on Broadway in a play, she dropped the "Barrymore" from her stage name, and is plain Ethel Colt. She's a big, good-looking girl and a promising trouper. She made her stage debut with her revered mother in "Scarlet Sister Mary" in 1930 . . . Frieda Hempel, the veteran opera star, just stepped off a liner here after two yearss abroad. She started the trip as a month's vacation and it lasted for 24! . . .

I find that the leading clubman of New York is the venerable Gen. Cornelius Vanderbilt, who belongs to no less than 13, or a grand slam in any game. One of the notable features of the life of postwar New York is the decline of club life among men. Wonder why. Wives crack down? . . . I hear that MacMillan has in hand the final copy for the new novel by Gladys Hasty Carroll. It's called "Neighbor to the Sky" and will be out in the later spring. Meanwhile, she and her husband have been sunning themselves on Paradise Beach at Nassau—what a place!

Have you heard about the new elasticized shoe, created by Perugia? It may revolutionize the whole shoe business. Available only in custom-made footwear, it is only a question of time until these new shoes, into which you can slip with a horn and which stay on without fastening, appear in ready-made styles. Appearing as all types of leather, they will stretch to the shape of the foot. Really very interesting. Imagine shoe-straps that are not really needed, but only decorate. We'll wait and see!

Transfer Pattern Easy Guide For Stitching Cat on Pillows

By Alice Brooks.

Pattern 5805.

NO "CAT NAP" for this sly puss—she's wide awake, and eager to see whether you select her for picture or pillow. Either one sets off her roly-poly beauty to perfection, just as a bit of woolly yarn or angora will make her seem wonderfully lifelike. A "beginner" will find this motif amazingly easy and quick to do and a bit of handiwork she'll be proud to show. In pattern 5805 you will find a transfer pattern of a cat 9¼ x 12¾ inches; a color chart and key; material requirements; illustrations of all stitches used.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Department, 259 West Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Destitute, Ailing, Deserted Wife Wonders if Her Husband Can Be Made to Support Her.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband deserted me some time ago but I did not care so much about that as he had already killed my love for him. We have been married 11 years and he was cruel and drunken all the time, often striking and beating me as well as being abusive in other ways. Also, along toward the last he failed to provide for me.

• • • •

I left him many times but always he would beg me to come back to him. I would return and try to start all over again but his conduct soon would be as unbearable as before. I was never a robust person and all the worry and trouble of the past 11 years has left me very frail. However, after he deserted me I went to work as a housemaid but had to give that up because of a nervous breakdown from which I have not yet recovered.

• • • •

I am now living with my parents, who are advanced in years. Father is unemployed and we are practically destitute. Sometimes I think I shall lose my mind. Do you know if my husband could be made to support me, without my having to live with him? Or at least to contribute to my support until I am able to work again? He is now living and working in Washington?

• • • •

The Commonwealth's Attorney here in Virginia tells me I can swear out a warrant here for non-support, but that chances are remote that they will be able to serve him in this State, and they refuse to go to the District of Columbia for him. Please tell me what is best to do. Thanking you in advance

MRS. M. F.

• • • •

DEAR MRS. M. F.: My advice is to talk your situation over fully with the director of the Legal Aid Bureau of the District of Columbia. The bureau has offices at 1010 Vermont avenue, in the Denrike Building. The telphone number is NAtional 8674. It is impossible to go into the ramifications of such a problem by mail, and it is equally impossible to advise accurately in such a situation without knowing all the circumstances of the case.

• • • •

I am told the Juvenile Court of the District has criminal jurisdiction in problems of desertion and nonsupport (even where there are no children); and that your case might be handled here on the theory that your husband's address represents your marital residence. But these are things on which the Legal Aid Bureau can advise you with accuracy and finality. Office hours are from 2 to 4 p. m. on week days and from 10 to 12 a. m. on Saturdays.

M. H.

A Generous Offer.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Never having written to a columist before, I am rather at a loss as to the proper technique. In fact, I'll have to write fast so as not to give myself time to recondsider and throw it all away. Briefly, it's this:

A rather unexpected recovery and long convalescence from illness gave me the impulse to contemplate. And people were so darned nice to me that I have a funny feeling I owe something. I have waited several months before writing you so as to be quite sure this wasn't a death-bed repentance sort of thing that would disappear as soon as I started to go around again.

• • • •

I tried church work, but somehow turkey suppers and bazaars to pay for an imposing edifice were not what I was looking for. So—do you know of any agency or individual who would use the quite untrained but willing services of a college graduate, 25 years old, for a couple of evenings a week? Or perhaps some elderly woman or invalid who would like to go for a ride of a Sunday afternoon (in a rattly but still active Ford coupe; so she's got to be a good sport)? Perhaps I could read aloud to a convalescent or just run in on someone who's lonely and bring my knitting and talk. Anything—just so it wouldn't be misinterpreted as patronizing.

Very sincerely yours,
L. O. W.

• • • •

DEAR L. O. W.: The volunteer workers' bureau of the Council of Social Agencies might be able to use your services. I suggest you talk with Mrs. W. A. Roberts, who directs the council. Her office is at 1101 M street, northwest, in the Community Chest Building. The telephone number is MEtropolitan 2284. From her you can no doubt get a list of institutions here where your services would be most welcome. Also, it is possible the publication of your letter may bring interesting suggestions from readers. There must be any number of invalids and elderly persons who would love to have you drop in for an occasional visit and bring your knitting, so to speak. Letters, if any, will be forwarded. M. H.

"H.W." Changes Story.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Some days ago a letter was answered in your column under the heading, "Stepmother's Antagonism Toward Independent Stepson Saddens Father's Life. He Asks What to Do." This letter was written on the impulse of the moment and was unjustifiable. It was not intended for publication and so stated. Now that it was published and so misleading I wish a correction made. This wife and stepmother is of clean character, Christian faith and disposition and anything but a bully in the home. The few trifles mentioned in the previous letter were misunderstood between self and wife and intended for the correcton of this son; instead of spite against him. I wish to impress upon our community that the previous statement was unfair and unjustifiable and wish to remove the wrong opinion and burden from all concerned. Sincerely, H. W.

• • • •

DEAR H. W.: There is nothing in the italicized footnote which customarily appears at the bottom of this column to suggest I conduct a personal correspondence advisory service, and although I may sometimes see fit to make special exceptions in certain cases, I should hesitate to commit myself to a personal reply to a person who concealed his identity behind the anonymity of a postoffice letter box, as you have done in both instances. I had to choose between advising you through this column or not at all. Assuming complete sincerity on your part, I was completely sincere and direct in supplying you with those "opinions and suggestions" you explicitly asked for. However, since you wish to retract the whole thing, I am willing to concede you this space in which to do it, although it is my opinion you owe me an apology for having taken up my time with a story you won't stick by. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Pediatricians, or children's specialists, are far less likely to be worried about the minor functional troubles of childhood than the parents. In general, it may be said that the doctor does not worry at all about what drives the parents crazy (such as neglecting a smallpox and diphtheria vaccination).

One of my best friends used to tell with delight a story of his childhood. His father was an extremely philosophical and easy-going man. One day, for some reason, my friend and his brother decided to run away. They were in the back yard at the time, on a hot summer day, and as they came racing around the corner of the house their father was sitting on the porch. "Where are you going, boys?" he asked.

"We are running away," they said.

"Don't run," said the father, slowly, "walk. Nobody is going to chase you."

It took all the zest out of the adventure. They didn't even get as far as the sidewalk.

The baby or child soon learns the delights of being the center of attraction, and plays the delicate organ of the parents' susceptibilities with every stop out.

Lack of Appetite.

Lack of appetite is one of these things that parents are continually worrying about, and which mostly pediatricians can't be bothered with. Most of the children are found in a one-child home. In a typical situation the parents are well educated, the mother has taken a course in home economics and home nursing, and has had firmly fixed in her mind before she had any children of her own that a healthy child has a good appetite. This is perfectly true, but sometimes the child finds that those perfect meals made up of exactly the proper proportion of vitamins and minerals and vegetables, etc., don't taste so all-fired good, so he goes on a sit-down hunger strike without being able to explain to himself or to the parents what is going on inside him.

No child should ever be made to eat. This rule applies whether the lack of appetite is due to actual disease or just perverseness. In the days when spinach was touted as the only means to health mothers kept saying, "I cannot get my child to eat spinach, and I poke it down every other day." The best reply I heard to this was by an experienced old physician, who said, "The child is displaying uncommon good taste." Certainly the admonition to quit poking would do for anything.

A fatal error in these cases, always supposing that they are functional, is to allow the child to get into the habit of eating between meals. "Only a cracker or two or a cookie or two" stays in the stomach just as long and spoils the next meal just as much as half a boxful.

The best guide to a child's nutritional condition is its weight, and with the lack-of-appetite child, who is healthy, if you leave it alone long enough it will eventually begin to eat with gusto. As one grandmother said, "If the child comes to our house he eats well unless the mother comes along."

Children Learn Most Between Ages of 1 and 3

World Is Big and New and Babies Gayly Explore Its Many Mysteries.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

WATCHING a tiny baby's ceaseless activity, one wonders that the child is not completely exhausted at the end of the day. As soon as he can get about, whether crawling or walking, he is never still. A few seconds is as much time as he can give consecutively to any one occupation.

Most of what he does seems pointless to the casual observer. Now he pats a cushion, smooths the leg of the table, feels of the tablecover. He is like a blind man in his gestures. The adult observer forgets that he himself knows how the cushion and table leg and cover feel. To the child these things are all new, and he must learn tactile values. So he goes from object to object, smoothing and patting and touching until, unconsciously, he, too, learns the feel of all the everyday things of life.

He throws things about. Surely destruction cannot be a necessary part of his training? But a certain amount of destruction is part of the training of every discoverer. How can one learn what breaks and what does not, unless one experiments. The smashing of ornaments and china as a habit should be discouraged, but no child was ever reared without leaving a certain amount of deliberate breakage behind him.

Between the years of 1 and 3, children probably work harder and learn more than any other time of their lives. Nothing that they do is purposeless, for everywhere they look or move a new experience or discovery is added to their store.

Entertainments for the Ted Shawn Dancers Make Performance Highlight of Social Season

The Misses Howry, the John G. Paines and Others Give Box Parties; Dinners Precede Program; Mr. Brookover Host at Breakfast.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Dinner parties preceding the program by Ted Shawn and his dancers at Constitution Hall last night, a breakfast at which Mr. Lyle Brookover entertained in the morning, with Mr. Shawn and members of his company present, and box parties given for the performance itself, marked it as one of the foremost social events of its kind this season.

Misses Mary and Elizabeth Howry, who headed the invitation committee for the program, had with them in their box Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, who wore a gown of eggplant velvet; Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mr. Percy Lee Atherton, Mrs. Copeland, of Richmond; Mr. Edmund Richardson and Mr. Lucien Howry. Miss Mary Howry was in black with a green sash and spangled jacket and her sister wore black satin.

The Paines Entertain.

Mr. and Mrs. John G. Paine, friends of Mr. Shawn who came from Westport, Conn., to be present last night, had in their box Mrs. A. L. Omohundro, who accompanied them from Westport, and Representative and Mrs. Fritz Lanham, whom they entertained at dinner at the Shoreham beforehand. Mrs. Paine wore white, with orchids, and Mrs. Omohundro a severely tailored black gown with a choker of gardenias. Mrs. Lanham was in a rose-colored frock and wore a corsage of gardenias.

Mrs. Ralph Worthington, who has just returned from the South, entertained informally at dinner and later had with her in her box Miss Klein Staten, who accompanied her from Thomasville, Ga., and is her guest for a few days; Mrs. Walter Denegre and Mrs. Mahlon Pitney. Mrs. Worthington is leaving again for Florida to join her daughter, Miss Ethel Worthington, and to remain ten days before returning with her March 26. They will stay in the Capital a month before sailing for Europe for the summer.

Princess Boncompagni's Guests.

Princess Margaret Boncompagni, who wore a violet evening gown, entertained in her box. Dr. and Mrs. Montgomery Blair, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Jackson and Dr. Lynn Cooper.

Mrs. Alfred Pearce Dennis entertained at dinner before the concert for a party including her son, Mr. John Value Dennis; Miss Louis Horton, Miss Edith Bottimore, Col. Edwin Clark, Mr. George Vanderhoef and Mr. Andrew Horton.

Mr. Lowell Mason had as his guests at dinner and later at the program Miss Rose d'Amore, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph O'Connell and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Jones.

With Mr. Brookover were Baroness von Allesch, Mr. and Mrs. James Robb and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke. Another party was that entertained by Col. and Mrs. Jeter Horton and Miss Melissa Heath Reiss. Their guests included Mrs. Richard Henning, Mrs. Ray Spear, Mrs. Dorothea Townsend, Mrs. Onan Hydrick, and Mr. Leonard Liebling, of New York City.

Miss Mae Helm had as her guests Mrs. Samuel Connor, Democratic committeewoman from Kentucky; Mrs. Dixie H. Lyon and Miss Louise Worden.

The breakfast at which Mr. Brookover entertained in the morning was given in the National Press Club in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Paine and Mrs. Omohundro and of Mr. Shawn and the men of his company.

Clever Place Cards.

The guests asembled at 10 o'clock and those at the host's table found their places designated by place cards in the form of checks made out in their names. This table and the smaller ones were decorated with bouquets of American beauty roses. Mr. Shawn sat at the right of the host and Mrs. Omohundro at his left.

Others in the company included Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Misses Mary and Elizabeth Howry, Mr. James S. Robb, Miss Marian Chace, Mr. Lowell Mason, Mr. Thomas Burke, Mr. Percy Lee Atherton, Miss Rose d'Amore, Mrs. Jeter Horton, Baroness von Allesch, Mrs. Reiss, Mr. John W. Cook, Mr. W. Bruce McNamee, Mr. Scott Copeland 3d, Miss Katherine Overton, Miss Ellen LaMotte, Miss Frieda Kenyon and Mrs. Alfred Pearce Dennis.

From Mr. Shawn's company were Mr. Jess Meeker, composer and pianist, who has collaborated with him in creating the dance spectacle; Mr. Frank Delmar and Mr. John Delmar, Mr. Foster Fitz-Simon, Mr. Barton Mumaw, Mr. Wilbur McCormack, Mr. Dennis Landers, Mr. Fred Hearn and Mr. Horace Jones. Mr. Meeker's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. William Miller, of New York, were here yesterday to see him but could not remain for the performance last night as Mr. Miller, also a dancer, is appearing there in "The Eternal Road."

From Washington Mr. Shawn and his company go to Detroit by motor.

Mr., Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, Jr., Plan to Visit South on Wedding Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, jr., who are on their wedding trip, have been skiing in New Hampshire and are now going South for a short stay before returning to Philadelphia.

Mrs. Roosevelt was before her marriage Miss Felicity Story, of Philadelphia. Mr. Roosevelt is the son of Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, of Washington, and the late Mr. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

The Netherlands Minister and Mme. van Haersma de With have issued invitations for a dinner tomorrow night in honor of the Counselor and Baroness van Breugel Douglas, who are leaving soon for Greece.

Mrs. Carlos Del Mar to Entertain Thursday for English Visitors

Mrs. Carlos Del Mar will entertain at a dinner on Thursday evening in honor of Kathleen, Viscountess Falmouth, and Mrs. Margot A. Holmes, of London, England, who are at the Shoreham Hotel after a trip through the West. Mrs. Del Mar knew them when she resided in London, where she lived for several years. Her first husband was Bulgarian Minister to the British capital.

The English visitors have spent considerable time in Tuscon, Ariz., and in California. Lady Falmouth has made a special study of gardens and Mrs. Holmes is doing botanical research. She has been studying the desert plants in the United States, especially.

Lady Falmouth and Mrs. Holmes will leave on Friday for Richmond, Va., and will then go to Charleston, S. C., to see the azalea gardens before sailing for England.

Mrs. Del Mar will entertain at a luncheon on Thursday in honor of Mrs. H. O. Chalkley, wife of the Commercial Counselor of the British Embassy.

Mrs. Enid Sims Snow Entertains With Informal Cocktail Party

Mrs. Enid Sims Snow entertained at a small informal cocktail party yesterday afternoon at her apartment on Wyoming avenue. Mrs. William T. Mann and her sister, Miss Betty Beale, assisted the hostess. The latter wore a long black gown with puffed sleeves of net.

Among those who gathered around the dining room table were the Greek Minister, Mr. Demetrios Sicilianos, with the counselor, Mr. Nicholas Lely, the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Henry Frank Heywood, she in black with a wide-brimmed hat, and Mr. and Mrs. John Farr Simmons, Mrs. Simmons also in black with a caracul coat.

Other guests were Mrs. Rose Saul Montgomery, Mrs. Royce Powell, whose husband is in New York for a few days; Mrs. Frank Currie, who is leaving soon to live in New York; Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Wharton Phillipps, the latter in a beige wool dress with brown trimmings, and Frau Blankenhorn, of the German Embassy.

Alice T. Hobart, Author, to Return Today to Be Guest of Her Brother

Alice Tisdale Hobart, whose latest book, "Yang and Yin," stands near the top of the best sellers, is returning to Washington today to spend a week as the guest of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Nourse. She left the Capital last fall with Mr. Hobart for California when he went to Berkeley as head of the Berkeley Bank of Co-operatives.

There will be much entertaining for her, including a dinner being given by Mr. and Mrs. Nourse this evening and luncheon at which Mrs. Hugh Mathews will entertain Thursday at the Army and Navy Club.

The former Undersecretary of State and Mrs. William Castle will entertain at a dinner this evening in honor of the newly appointed Counselor of the United States Embassy to Japan and Mrs. Eugene Dooman. Mr. and Mrs. Dooman will leave Washington shortly for Japan, where Mr. Dooman has spent several years at the embassy.

Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose will entertain at a large dinner on Thursday evening at the Shoreham Hotel.

Sojourning on Florida Coast

MISS CORNELIA HATCH,
is successfully avoiding Washington's snow and slush on the beach at the Pancoast Hotel in Miami Beach, Fla., where she is sojourning with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Hatch, who make their home at the Wardman Park Hotel. They will probably return the latter part of this month.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

Mrs. Calhoun to Spend Week in Washington

Mrs. W. J. Calhoun, who is at the Hay-Adams House and plans to remain a week in Washington, is being entertained during her stay.

Mrs. Calhoun's late husband was at one time United States Minister to China, and her home in Peking, formerly a palace, is one of the show places of that city. The former Lucy Monroe, of Chicago, she is a sister of the late Harriet Monroe, well-known poet, and founder and editor of the magazine Poetry.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn.

Bill Pearson has taken up another sport. With the last few days of snow he has found skiing much to his liking. Up on Wyoming avenue near his home there are several "young" hills that offer open invitation for winter sports of a moderate variety. So Bill—who by the way is quite handy with hammer and saw—ripped apart a barrel he found, and made off with two staves. These he carefully greased and equipped with leather straps. After hours of fun on his skis he returned home and put them away. The following day, there still being snow, he went in search of his footgear, but found not a sign of them where they had been left, or anywhere else for that matter. Carefully questioning of everyone in the household disclosed the fact that William, the chauffeur, in search of kindling wood, and not recognizing the "skis" as such, broke them up in the desired sizes.

Although more skis were constructed, somehow they did not work as well as the original pair.

Who says cats aren't intelligent? Just listen to this tale and then form your opinion. Baroness von Allesch, wha has several Siamese cats—those lovely exotic creatures of the feline world—called her New York home the other evening. After conversing for a while she heard a new and very strange sound over the wires. It was a mewing, and was Mungo, her pet, which she had recently taken to New York. Calling him by name she was repaid by a series of very loud and eager cat-chats. From New York later came the description of Mungo, who usually never sits still a moment, but for once—surprise of surprises—sat with one pointer ear pressed close to the receiver listening to his owner's voice and trying in his own way to talk to her.

Last night, for once, diplomats were able to sit back and chuckle merrily at diplomatic intrigue. That's not so strange when one considers that both the laughing and the intrigue took place at the Belasco Theater in the delightful, rollicking "His Excellency," from the pen of Leslie Reade. We might add, footlights separated the two. The informality of the American delegate in speech and costume brought the first whoop of laughter from the audience.

Particularly enjoying the comedy were the Polish Ambassador, Count Potocki, the Counselor of the Embassy and Mme. Wankowicz, and Michael Budny, all of the Polish Embassy, who occupied central seats.

Others from Washington's diplomatic world were the Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. MacWhite, the Minister of Panama and Senora de Boyd and their daughter, Dora; the Swiss Minister and Mme. Peter, the wife of the Netherlands Minister, Mme. van Haersma de With, and her daughter, Nora; the Italian Ambassador and Donna Suvich, Otkar Kabelac, of the Czechoslovakian Legation, escorting Diana Rowland, Resid Anamur of the Turkish Embassy and Senora de DeBayle.

Others first nighting were Mrs. Claude A. Swanson with her son, Douglas Hall; the Acting Postmaster General and Mrs. W. W. Howes, Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings and Larry Rubles.

Mr. Rudolph Forster, of the White House, was a very broadly grinning host at luncheon in the Pall Mall room of the Raleigh the other day. With him were his small granddaughter, Joan, and one of her little friends. The girls, thrilled by their surroundings, looked around with wide eyes, not missing a single trick (sounds like bridge), and giggling delightedly.

Lindsay Moss simply cannot stay away from Washington, something for which his many friends here are very glad. He is expected to drop in within a few days and will be the guest of the H. C. Whitehursts and their daughter, Maria Milne.

Novelist to Address 74th Club Luncheon

Miss Olga Moore, whose novel "Wind Swept" was recently published, will be guest speaker at the meeting of the Seventy-fourth Club tomorrow at a luncheon at the Parrot Tea Room at 1 o'clock.

Mary Howe Song Group To Be Heard

String Quartet to Play Works of District Composer.

Compositions by Mary Howe, better known to members of Capital society as Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, will be presented by the Washington String Quartet when it broadcasts on one of the Music Guild's programs over the red network of N. B. C. March 23 from 2:30 until 3 o'clock.

The second half of the program will comprise a group of her songs, a setting to Shakespeare's "Mistress Mine," which has been published and widely sung; and three unpublished songs, the words of which are poems by Elinor Wylie: "Withouten You," "Fair Annet's Song" and "Velvet Shoes," all of which have been heard in concerts in Washington.

Sunday afternoon, Mrs. Howe's transcription of Bach's "Sheep May Safely Graze" was played as one of the encores by the two-piano duo, Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson at the program by the National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall, and another of her works, "Castellana," written for two pianos and orchestra, was presented some time ago.

The songs on the Music Guild program will be sung by Miss Judith Litante, of New York.

The concert, which was to have been given at the Sulgrave Club by the Washington String Quartet this Thursday, has been postponed until Thursday, April 22, because of the program by the National Symphony Orchestra, in Richmond, on that date. Members of the quartet are members of the symphony.

Indiana Society To Fete McNutts

Dance This Eveninng Will Honor Commissioner and His Wife.

This evening the Indiana Society of Washington will honor former Governor of Indiana Paul V. McNutt, who has been appointed High Commissioner of the Philippines, and Mrs. McNutt at a reception at Wardman Park.

Commissioner and Mrs. McNutt will sail soon in order that he may assume his new office and the society is planning to make this a real "bon voyage" party for them.

The distinguised guests will be the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, Resident Commissioner of the Philippines to the United States Quintin Paredes and Mrs. Paredes. The President of the Philippines, Manuel L. Quezon, has been invited and hopes to attend.

As Gov. McNutt was formerly dean of the law school of Indiana University, a large number of the Indiana University alumni will be present.

There will be dancing from 10 o'clock to 1 with a floor show. All Hoosiers in Washington and vicinity have been invited to be present.

Trinity Alumnae Plan Annual Dance April 16

The Washington Chapter of the Trinity College Alumnae Association announces its twenty-third annual dance to be held on Friday, April 16. It is to be a dinner dance, and will be held at the Mayflower Hotel.

Miss Adele Cavanaugh, president of the Washington chapter, has named Mrs. Theodore B. Bogley as general chairman of the dance committee, and Mrs. Bogley has asked Miss Marion L. Schwartz to act as chaiman of patronesses, Mrs. Malcolm Turton as chairman of tickets and reservations, Miss Laurette Martin as chairman of music, Mrs. Raymond Ruppert to have charge of the menu, Miss Julia Diggins the posters and Miss Nora O'Neil of publicity.

Miss Minnie E. Carroll, long associated with social activities of Trinity College, is assisting the entire dance committee.

Box Holders Announced.

Among the box holders already listed for the Fort Myer pageant, "Hoof Prints," which will be given April 1, 2, 3 and 4, are the Ambassador of Italy and Donna Matilde de Suvich, the Ambassador of Poland and Countess Potocka, the Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Alfaro, the Chief of Staff of the United States Army and Mrs. Malin Craig, Senator and Mrs. David A. Reed, Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, Col. and Mrs. Charles G. Mortimer, Maj. and Mrs. Henry Leonard, Col. and Mrs. John A. Crane, Mr. Humphrey Daniel and Mrs. R. W. Hasbrouck.

$150,000 Voted For Completion Of Rail Inquiry

Senate Group to Resume Financing Methods Hearing Next Month.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate set aside $150,000 yesterday to complete its investigation of railway finance, which already has produced tentative recommendations for abolition, or Federal control of "super holding companies" in the transportation field.

The appropriation is one of the largest ever made for a Congressional inquiry. It was approved without debate a few minutes before Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, of the investigating committee, submitted his preliminary report.

Although the report emphasized the "dangers" of unregulated holding companies, it urged more careful study before Congress adopts a clearly defined policy.

Wheeler said his committee, which already has spent $100,000, could keep going for about ten months with the new funds.

Hearings will be resumed early in April, he said, when a group of New York financiers, probably including J. P. Morgan & Co., partners, will be called.

They will be asked to describe their part in financing the holding companies through which the late Van Sweringen brothers controlled America's greatest railway empire —a 23,000-mile network linking ten major lines.

Further inquiry is necessary, the report said, to determine "whether it is worth trying to control this type of organization" or "whether it would be wiser to forbid them altogether."

"There may be a point beyond which supervision can not be effective without inordinate cost," it added, "or perhaps can not be effective at any cost."

President Greets Oldest Mother, 105

Memphis, Tenn., March 15 (AP).—The Nation's "oldest mother," Mrs. Mary N. Rice, read a greeting from President Roosevelt on her 105th birthday and philosophized a bit about marriage and divorce today.

Most of the day, at the insistence of her family, she remained in bed, but she had a word or two for everyone who called. Cheerful and mentally alert, she said: "I think it is worse for two people to live under the same roof, quarreling, making life miserable for each other, than to separate or get a divorce."

Mid-West Catholics Hold Mission Parley

Cincinnati, March 15 (AP).—Ecclesiastical representatives of 13 Roman Catholic dioceses of the Middle West attended a conference today devoted to mission work of the church's pontifical Society for the Propagation of the Faith.

It was the thirteenth such meeting in a series of 16 to be attended by the Right Rev. Mgr. Thomas J. McDonnell, of New York, national director of the society. A similar conference will be held tomorrow in St. Louis, and later in the week at Chicago and Dubuque, Iowa.

Brig. Gen. Phillips, 80, Is Dead in California

El Centro, Calif., March 15 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Charles Leonard Phillips, 80, United States Army, retired, died here today.

He served in both the Spanish-American and World Wars. He was graduated from West Point in 1881. His commands included Fort Dade in Florida, the Key West Barracks, Fort McKinley in Maine and the Fifty-second Field Artillery, Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg, S. C.

Eccles' Statement on Credit and Monetary Policies

Text of the statement yesterday of Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board:

I wish to correct erroneous interpretations which have been circulating with reference to my position on credit and monetary policies.

I have been and still am an advocate of an easy money policy and expect to continue to be an advocate of such a policy so long as there are large numbers of people who are unable to find employment in private industry, which means that the full productive capacity of the Nation is not being utilized. Under such conditions, to restrict the available supply of capital and thus to make it difficult, if not impossible, to employ these people would not only be anti-social but uneconomic.

I do not believe that sharp price rises in certain basic commodities should be controlled at this stage of the recovery by a restrictive money policy which would tend to freeze and might bring about an actual reduction in the total volume of employment and production. The price rises to which I refer are the result primarily of nonmonetary factors, incuding foreign armaments demands, strikes and monopoistic practices by certain groups both in industry and organized labor. These conditions have in turn led to speculative security and commodity buying which serves to accelerate the price advances.

Money must be used as the servant to increase production and employment at home and not to restrict employment and production at a time when the national income is still many billions below what it has been in the past and many more billions short of what it could and should be in the future. Therefore, other means than a restrictive money policy must be used under present conditions to control unwarranted price advances which result in the rise of the cost of living.

The way to control unjustifiable price advances is by increasing production. This can be done so long as there is idle labor willing to work, so long as there are unused natural resources and an abundance of money at reasonable rates. All three of these conditions are present at this time.

With reference to the volume of money, after the full increase in reserve requirements goes into effect on May 1, there will be more bank deposits and currency in circulation by fully two billion dollars than at the peak of 1928 and 1939. There will also be excess reserves upon which billions of further credit can be extended by the banks without the need for borrowing from the Federal Reserve Banks. In other words, the supply of money to finance increased production at low rates is ample. Furthermore, with the ample reserves of the Federal Reserve banks additional supplies of money can be made available when needed to finance expanded production at reasonable rates by the purchase of Government securities in the open market. At the same time, the reserve system has instruments for controlling directly the diversion of bank credit into security speculation.

Millions Jobless.

With reference to labor, numerically there are still millions of unemployed people able and willing to work and several millions more engaged on public works who could be diverted from public to private pay rolls. But there is approaching a special problem of skilled labor shortages developing in certain fields. This situation should be anticipated and met as rapidly as it develops by releasing skilled workers from public to private employment and by vocational and increased apprenticeship training.

Finally, there was not at the peak of 1929 and there is not now any lack of raw materials and natural resources to furnish the means of production.

Under such conditions, the country needs the full and coordinated utilization of the three essential factors of man power, natural resources and capital until we have attained a maximum production and distribution of real wealth in the form of housing, clothing and all other goods necessary to maintain and improve the standard of living of all of our people. It is not sound public policy and it is not in the ultimate interest of either capital, labor, or agriculture for any one of the three groups, broadly speaking, to try to gain an advantage at the expense of the others, which only makes for instability of the national economy and hence is bound to be temporary.

"Shortsighted" Action.

Increased wages and shorter hours when they limit or actually reduce production are not at this time in the interest of the public in general or in the real interest of the workers themselves. When wage increases are passed along to the public, and particularly when industries take advantage of any existing situation to increase prices far beyond increased labor costs, such action is shortsighted and indefensible policy from every standpoint.

Wage increases and shorter hours are justified and wholly desirable when they result from increasing production per capita and represent a better distribution of the profits of industry. When they retard and restrict production and cause price inflation, they result in throwing the buying power of the various groups in the entire economy out of balance, working a particular hardship upon agriculture, the unorganized workers, the recipients of fixed incomes and all consumers. The upward spiral of wages and prices into inflationary price levels can be as disastrous as the downward spiral of deflation. If such conditions develop, the Government should intervene in the public interest by taking such action as is necessary to correct the abuses.

The remedy for a price inflation when the country has unused man power, natural resources and capital, is through more, not less production, through an orderly, balanced use of these three fundamental factors and not by creating a needless, artificial shortage of any one of them.

Explains Function.

What, then, is the function of the monetary authorities of the Government? It is to help bring about and maintain the essential element of an adequate supply of funds at reasonable rates to call forth and facilitate production and distribution. A policy of easy money in order to make available an adequate supply of capital at reasonable rates cannot, however, of itself succeed in maintaining a stable economy.

The Federal Reserve System, which is an arm of the Government, is powerless to maintain a stable economy unless other essential non-monetary factors necessary to stability are brought into line either by private interests or by the Government. The Federal Reserve System has exerted the greatest possible influence to bring about and maintain easy money conditions as a necessary integral part of the recovery movement. An ample supply of funds at reasonable rates exists and will exist after the increased reserve requirements take full effect on May 1. So far as I am concerned, I am convinced that such a supply of funds should continue to be made available at rates that will encourage full recovery and help to maintain it.

Under present conditions of an accelerating recovery, a continued easy money policy, to be successful in achieving and maintaining a balanced recovery, must be accompanied by a prompt balancing of the Federal budget and the subsequent retirement of public debt by the Government in relationship to the expansion of private credit. I have not been and I am not now in favor of balancing the budget at the expense of the destitute and the unemployed who are unable to find private employment, but I am in favor of increasing taxes on incomes and profits if necessary to sustain the volume of relief and at the same time bring the budget into balance and permit the paying down of public debt as private debt expands. Only by this process can monetary inflation be prevented.

If, in the meantime, however, stable recovery is endangered by unwarranted price and cost increases arising from non-monetary causes, they must be combated by other than monetary means. To resort to monetary restraints under such conditions would involve the risk of halting recovery and precipitating another deflation before we have recovered from the last one and before the Government is in position to bear the costs of it without causing a monetary inflation.

I cannot favor at this juncture the remedy of "tight money" and hight interest rates, to reach special conditions. Such a remedy if invoked now in the attempt to control unjustifiable and monopoly created prices would result in a reduction of the Nation's buying power. Otherwise this remedy would not be effective in bringing prices down. A decline in buying power would, in turn, result in increasing the already large volume of unemployment which would have to be supported out of public funds and in a decrease of the national income, with the consequence that the budget would be thrown hopelessly out of balance.

The remedy lies not in a restrictive monetary policy, but in vigorous government intervention with all the powers at its command to deal directly with the causes that might endanger the progress of a stable and enduring recovery.

Quotes Roosevelt.

With reference to these broad policies in connection with the budget and Government finances, the President sated in his budget message in January. "We shall soon be reaping the full benefits of these programs (to combat the depression) and shall have at the same time a balanced budget that will also include provision for reduction of the public debt." And in his radio address on March 9, the President said, "In 1933, you and I knew that we must never let our economic system get completely out of joint again—that we could not afford to take the risk of another great depression. We also became convinced that the only way to avoid repetition of those dark days was to have a Government with power to prevent and to cure the abuses and the inequalities which had thrown that system out of joint. We then had a program of remedying those abuses and inequalities—to give balance and stability to our economic system—to make it bombproof against the causes of 1929."

A policy of monetary restraint at this juncture would be calculated to prevent attainment of this objective of balance and stability in our economic system.

Horner's Children Get Bulk of Estate

Naming his son and daughter as principal beneficiaries of his $215,000 estate, Firman R. Horner, Washington real estate operator who died March 5, asked that after the death of the children the estate be divided between his grandchildren.

The will set up a trust fund, the income from which is to go to Charles B. Horner, a son, of Los Angeles, and Marcia Cotter, a daughter, of 1215 Monroe street northeast. The son is to get two-fifths of the income and the daughter three-fifths. In addition, both were given $5,000 outright.

Among those named to share in the estate were Elizabeth W. Swett and Lydia M. Humphries, $1,000 each; Violet H. Jordan, Theodora Bailey, Elizabeth H. Templeton and Mrs. Anna Blair, $500 each.

Former Partner Of Envoy Davies Sues for $100,000

New York, March 15 (AP).—Fred A. Landeck, who identified himself as a former business partner, filed a $100,000 libel action today against Joseph E. Davis, U. S. Ambassador to Soviet Russia, and asked for an accounting of the profits of various business ventures in which he said the two were engaged from 1918 to 1925.

Attorneys for the Ambassador entered a general denial and asserted the suit was outlawed by the statute of limitations.

Davies received certain commissions which Landeck did not share, the complainant said.

The action was based on a letter Landeck said Davis wrote Henry Wolff, an attorney for Landeck in 1930, about his handling of a mortgage on a New York property. In answer Davis said, regarding the letter, that he repeated his charge that Landeck "wrongfully diverted and appropriated large sums to his own use."

4 Hurt in Fires Reported Better

Four persons were reported improved in hospitals yesterday from burns they suffered in fires which swept through their homes during the early hours Sunday morning.

Most seriously injured of the four is Mrs. Mary Williams, 50, who was dropped about 25 feet out of a rear window by her husband when flames gutted the second floor of their home at 3300 Prospect avenue northwest. Mrs. Williams suffered severe burns to her shoulders and several fractured ribs.

Joseph Branzell, 23, also was burned in the Prospect avenue fire. He is in Gallinger Hospital, where physicians said his condition is not serious.

Patsy Pisana, 24, and Philip Morones, 26, who were rescued by firemen from a narrow ledge atop a rooming house at 1426 K street northwest when they were trapped by flames, will recover, doctors said. Both were taken to Gallinger Hospital.

Fireplace Location.

The fireplace should be so located in a living room that the furniture which is grouped around it will not be in the direct line of traffic between doors.

Bob Burns Says

Copyright, 1937

By Bob Burns.

Some of my Hollywood friends try to kid me by callin' me "earthy," but I want'ta tell you, they can't pay me a bigger compliment. There's somethin' about bein' brought up on the soil that gives you a sense of value.

I knew a wealthy farmer down home who sent his daughter away to a finishing school. She brought her titled suitor home with her.

This titled fella got right down to business. He went to the farmer and he says "I want to marry your daughter, but first I want to know what you intend to do for her."

The farmer looked the fella over from his spats to his monocle and he says, "Well, now, I've done jest 'bout all I can for my daughter." He said, "I gave her an education so she could read the papers and read all about you titled fellas, and if she ain't got no more sense than to marry you now, she don't deserve no better luck."

THE FEDERAL DIARY

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

It interested us . . . So it's passed on to you:

Consider the uses of the scallop, the bivalve with a subcircular shell with radiating ribs . . . Realizing that you probably don't want to consider the scallop's uses, the Government's fisheries bureau is considering them for you, particularly at request of the Federated Scallop Producers Co-operative Association of Brooklyn, N. Y.

The present situation: Only the abductor muscle of the scallop is used for food, and undoubtedly scallop abductor muscle on toast brings fancy prices in the better places . . . The remainder of the meat is discarded at sea or else in the packing plant . . . The problem: Believing this waste may contain valuable properties, a study is being made by the bureau to convert the waste into articles of commerce.

• • • •

The situation in this case interested us. . . . The situation whereby it seems impossible nowadays for the District Department, A. F. G. E. to be in semi-monthly meeting assembled without coming hear to the painful duty of telling somebody to tie his application outside. . . . Three times Lucien Koch, of Labor Lodge 12, walked in, application in hand. . . . Three times they told him there wasn't a chair in the house that would fit him. . . . At the last meeting, Leander B. Lovell, of the State Department, walked in. . . . They didn't like the cut of his political pants, apparently, and he walked right out again. . . . Constantly embroiled in such a stew the department has had little time or temper to arrange for such light things as picnics or such heavy things as the elders of the group should be attending to. . . . Maybe they could adjust it all by hanging on the door a piece of cardboard painted red, bearing a legend: "If you like this color abide by the other and nearby sign," which, in turn, would read "tSanding Room Only."

• • • • •

There may be some way of driving home your point without chasing it first around a stump. . . . But the way would be of no appeal to the editors of the Union Review, published by the now renowned Social Security Board Union . . . They lean to the fanciful, devious and even poetic approach, as is illustrated in this:

"Oscar Zilch is used to hearing the old gag: 'I stood up for you in an argument last night—somebody said you weren't fit to live with pigs; I said you were.' They even have a poem about him: "Oscar Zilch is strong and able, but his room looks like a stable' . . . Don't blame Oscar. He doesn't want to live in a pig-sty. But he can't afford anything better, and he doesn't know what to do about it . . .

"He doesn't know that he should support the Social Security Board Union's campaign for better housing . . . Your union is fighting for: Rent control, adequate sanitation and fire laws, Government-built low-cost housing; stop Zilching, join your union."

Jefferson Shrine Plan, Costs Scored

League for Progress to Fight Execution of Present Design.

Group Also Approves Method Used in Selection of Architect.

Coincident with an announcement by the Fine Arts Commission that it will take up the design of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Saturday, the League for Progress in Architecture let it be known yesterday that it intends to fight execution of the plans to a finish.

In a written statement, H. P. Caemmerer, Fine Arts secretary, lauded the Boylan commission's selection of the Tidal Basin as the site for the monument.

"It is significant that this location should have been selected as a memorial to Thomas Jefferson," said Caemmerer, "for it was his compromise with Hamilton that resulted first of all in the location of the Federal City south of the Mason and Dixon line.

"Then Jefferson co-operated with George Washington in the preparation of the L'Enfant plan of 1792 and while Secretary of State he was the first superintendent of public buildings. The memorial will face the White House, which Jefferson occupied for a period of eight years, and during which he did much to establish our National Capital along lines fitting for a capital city of a great country."

Resembles Pantheon.

The design by John Russell Pope was described as one "that resembles the Pantheon, at Rome, of which Jefferson was an ardent admirer."

Meantime, however, at an indignation meeting at 2020 Massachusetts avenue northwest, the newly organized group called the League for Progress in Architecture was drafting a program to block execution of the project, which has been approved by the Memorial Commission, headed by Representative John J. Boylan (Democrat), of New York.

The league branded the Pope design "completely inappropriate" and "completely without imagination or vitality." It charged that the approved plan, which calls for remodeling of the Tidal Basin, will produce traffic snarls at Highway Bridge and eliminate the Japanese cherry trees that now fringe the basin.

Cost Also Assailed.

Comprised principally of architects in Government service, the league also said the cost of the proposed monument will be exorbitant and condemned the award of the architect's contract without an open competition being held first.

"The proposed design could equally well serve, by a simple change in the inscription, as a memorial to Theodore Roosevelt, Edgar Allan Poe or the Supreme Court," said a league statement. "In fact, one rather suspects it has."

The group already has protested to Representative Henry Ellenbogen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, who said last week that he believes the architectural commission should have been awarded by competition, and other members of Congress.

It will attempt to block appropriations for the memorial, for which Congress has authorized $3,000,000.

4 Bandit Suspects In Line-up Tonight

Police tonight will stage a lineup at which will appear a colored bandit reported to have been identified as the man who shot the wife of a taxicab driver in a holdup last week.

Also to appear will be a man accused by police of having held up more than 10 grocery stores during the last few months. Approximately 150 victims of recent robberies will view the suspects.

Police said the men to be paraded before the witnesses are Vincent H. Samuels, colored, 20, who is alleged to have admitted 25 stickups, and three white men, Charles G. Williamson, 43, of the 600 block L street northwest; Edward Grinder, 36, of the 1100 block L street northwest, and James H. Collins, 25, of the 300 block F street northwest.

Detectives said Collins was identified by Sylvester Laurell, 17 T street northwest, as the bandit who shot his wife after taking $5.60 from them. Mrs. Laurell is recovering in Sibley Hospital from a bullet wound in the hip.

To Honor St. Patrick.

Gen. William H. Beck Circle, Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, will give a St. Patrick's Day tea, from 8 until 10 p. m. tonight at 1462 Girard street northwest.

Liquor Charge Made in Strike Branded False

Pants Factory Head Denies Whisky Used to Lure Workers Back.

Whether or not there is a strike at the National Pants Co., 408 First street southeast, is still uncertain. Charles Pilzer, plant manager, saying only 19 workers were out, yesterday emphatically denied a strike had ever existed.

Other estimates, however, were higher. Representative John T. Bernard (Farmer-Labor, Minnesota, is supporting the strike, and said he had addressed an organization meeting attended by 275 of the factory's employes.

Late yesterday, Pilzer, in a statement to The Post, denied as "absolutely untrue" charges made by the League of Women Shoppers that liquor had been used to lead the strikers back to work.

Although Representative Bernard has no present plans calling for a Congressional investigation, he revealed yesterday he had, in three speeches impressed on the company's employes the importance of unity.

Developments on the other labor fronts late yesterday had stalled. A. Gardiner Moore, president of the Hotel Men's Association, announced the conference on the Hotel Employes Alliance agreement had adjourned until Thursday afternoon or Friday morning.

He said, however, a peaceful settlement was indicated.

Picketing at the Alexandria Baking Co.'s plant in Alexandria, begun yesterday morning, will be resumed early today, E. W. Tattersall, manager, admitting suburban delivery had stopped, said no disturbance had occurred at the factory.

Tattersall also said the 24 driver-salesmen, members of Bakery Salesmen's Union, No. 33, now on strike, will under no circumstances be reemployed. He reiterated his stand against a union contract.

The police court case of two National Pants Co. pickets, who had been charged with assault, was continued until Wednesday. The pickets are Effie Arledge, 32, of 1119 K street northwest, and Edna Stetler, of Benning.

Pa. Mother Given Chair For Murder of Child, 3

Hollidaysburg, Pa., March 15 (AP). Judge Marion D. Patterson sentenced Mrs. Margaret Karmendi, 24, today to die in the electric chair for killing her 3-year-old son, Matthew.

Her friend, Roy Lockard, also 24, already is under death sentence. The date of the executions must be fixed by the Governor.

Court of Appeals Ruling Broadens Clause in Divorce

In a ruling that broadened the scope of the "general relief" clause of the usual divorce suit, the United States Court of Appeals yesterday held that Roy T. Helvestine, husband of Pauline Helvestine, was entitled to a limited divorce although he specifically had not sought such a decree.

In outlining the case, the appellate court said Mrs. Helvestine sought a limited divorce on the grounds of cruelty, drunkenness and desertion. The husband denied his wife's charges and filed a cross-bill accusing her of cruelty.

The trial court held that neither had substantiated charges, and no action was taken. In the higher court, though, it was held that in the husband's complaint he had sought "general relief," a term which empowered the trial judge to grant him a limited divorce, if he had proven his cruelty charges sufficiently. The divorce was denied in the lower court because there was no specific request for a limited divorce in the event of a denial of an absolute divorce.

In the opinion, written by Associate Justice Robb, the high court asserted the husband should have been granted a limited divorce on the basis of what he proved, although he had sought an absolute divorce. Attorneys Alfred M. Schwartz and Raymond Neudecker represented the husband and wife.

Office Opened Here for Count Of Unemployed

In an effort to prove to Congress the desperate plight of the District's employables who are not receiving relief, the District Workers Alliance, an organization of WPA and unemployed workers, yesterday announced it had opened a temporary office for the registration of District unemployed.

The organization pointed out that at present there is no accurate count of the men unemployed in the District who are not on relief or WPA projects.

The temporary office for the unemployed census will be located at 810 F street northwest and the hours for registration will be from 4 to 7 p. m. daily.

The Alliance stated that at present there is no relief for employables; that is, those able to work but unable to find jobs. Various estimates have been made that there are from 2,500 to 5,000 in this class. The organization feels that the unemployed census will show that actually there are close to 4,000 employables and their dependents in need of aid.

Indorse Drive for Jobless.

The program of the Washington Council for Social Agencies to obtain funds for the District's 3,000 jobless "employables" was indorsed last night by the Sixteenth Street Heights Citizens Association at the Alexander Shepherd School.

The group also indorsed the bill for holding election primaries in the District.

Three new members were taken into the association. J. Mason, Frank E. Koch and John T. Moss.

Hecht and Lansburgh Officials Make Talks

Morris Moss, assistant store manager of the Hecht Co., and T. D. Ellsworth, store superintendent of Lansburg & Bro., were speakers at last night's meeting of the National Capital Group of Controllers at the Raleigh Hotel.

Moss' subject was "Customer returns, Causes and Remedies—From an Internal View." Ellsworth spoke on "The Analytical Phase of the Adjustment Office Operations Report."

Ban on Parking Nears as Snow Delays Traffic

Cherry Blossoms Spared as 6 Inches Fall; Today to Be Clear.

snow. Skies cleared in Danville late in the day after hail and snow had fallen, and the snow ceased at sundown in Lynchburg, after carpeting the streets.

Fine snow flew throughout the Shenandoah Valley, reaching a depth of 6 inches, the Associated Press reported. Snow fell in Richmond and Petersburg, and continued to glaze the highway where two Rollins College students met death early in the day. A chill rain visited Norfolk and the coastal area.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen announced plans to enact a new no-parking ordinance to replace the one which has thrice been invalidated in Police Court.

Seal Preparing Appeal.

An apepal from the ruling of Judge Curran, latest to overthrow the no-parking between 2 a. m. and 8 a. m. law, is being prepared by Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal, Hazen said.

Thisordinance was enacted originally for the announced purpose of giving street cleaners a chance to remove snow along curbstones during the winter. Judges found the ordinance unlawful once last winter and twice this winter.

In the event Seal's appeal fails, Hazen said, an all-embracing law of great scope will be proposed, which would ampower Commissioners to ban parking on "all arterial highways."

Favors Broad Powers.

Hazen indicated he believed the three Commissioners should have very broad powers in the matter of control over District highways, and should have final say as to who shall park where and when. He did qualify his threat to ban all parking on arterial highways by saying that in certain cases parking on one sideo ft hose thoroughfares would be permitted.

Burglary Follows Ringing of Alarm, Search for Thief

A burglar alarm was sounded at 1210 F street northwest about 11 o'clock Saturday night. Detectives and police scoured the building and found nothing.

Half an hour later, a uniformed policeman entered Nunnally's candy store, at 1208 F street northwest, to report to the manager that the swinging ladder of the fire escape in the rear was down.

Sometime between midnight Saturday and 8 a. m. Sunday, Nunnally's safe was cracked and $600 taken. Police are searching for the burglar.

It is believed impossible for the thief to have been in Nunnally's or next door waiting for the police to leave. He entered the candy store through a window off the fire escape on the third floor.

World Archive Urged to Record Women's Deeds

Establishment of a world's archives center to hold records of achievements of women through the ages was urged last night by Dr. Mary Beard, author and wife of Dr. Charles A. Beard, famous historian, in a talk at the banquet of the Business and Professional Women's Club at the Washington Hotel.

Dr. Beard outlined the history of women in business and the professions and urged that the woman of today think, read, travel and get new experiences. She warned against accepting ready-made ideas.

"Thinking," she said, "is the interpretation of history. You must know what went on yesterday to be able to think today."

Earlene White, first vice president of the national organization, outlined accomplishments and future aims of the clubs.

Ruth Robinson, president of the local club, presided.

Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, WPA administrator for women's projects, was another speaker.

Federation Tables Bus Line Question

Failure of the Interfederation Conference last night to act on a tion by Stephen James, of Montgomery County, to refer the question of American University Park bus line extension caused the question to be tabled for the next meeting.

Chairman Thomas E. Lodge announced a special committee to appear at a hearing at the War Department Friday on the question of flood control as follows: Fred W. Gast, chairman, Prince Georges County; Miss Elaine Epply, Prince Georges County; Col. Gilbreth, Montgomery County, and I. Chance Buchanan, of Arlington County.

Man Seized In $14,000 Pension Hoax

North Carolinian, Jailed, Accused of Forging Veteran's Papers.

Was Arrested in Hotel Here After Soldier Sought Bonus.

Irvin Ben Rosen, 45, who said his home was in Fayetteville, N. C., was held under $15,000 bond by Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday on a charge of having forged the name of a World War veteran, and obtained pensions and bonuses of more than $14,000 from the Veterans' Administration. After remanding the prisoner to jail, Commissioner Turnage had his case continued for a further hearing in two weeks.

The arrest of Rosen by Secret Service Agent Maurice Allen in a fashionable downtown hotel several days ago brought to light, officials said, one of the strangest cases growing out of the World War.

Rosen, who denied the charge, is alleged to have used the name of Benjamin Feiring, of New York, in obtaining the sums. He must have applied for a certificate in Feiring's name shortly after the war, officials pointed out, although they could not learn from the prisoner any of the details of the crime for which he is held.

For some reason Feiring, who is understood to be well to do in New York, is said to have never applied for compensation. But when he applied for his bonus the Veterans' Administration discovered that compensation and the bonus, as well, had been drawn.

Fingerprints proved that for years the hoax had been going on.

Authorities said apparently Rosen had obtained a copy of Feiring's discharge certificate and set out to impersonate the veteran.

Rosen, before Commissioner Turnage and at the time of his arrest, insisted he was Feiring.

Special agents will endeavor to bring Feiring to the second hearing here within two weeks.

Incendiarism Suspected In Four-Dwelling Blaze

Fire, believed to have been of incendiary origin, last night badly damaged four frame houses in the 1200 block of Sixth-and-a-Half street northwest.

The structures were unoccupied.

Vermont Confederate Attends First College Reunion at 102

A Vermont Yankee who fought for the Confederacy in the Civil War came to Washington last night to celebrate, 83 years after graduation, his first Middlebury College alumni reunion.

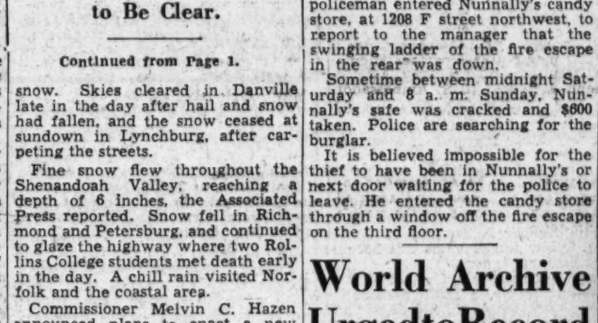
He is Edward W. Wilcox, 103-year-old resident of Norfolk and the oldest living alumnus of Middlebury College.

Wilcox was the toast of the evening last night as graduates from Washington, Maryland and Virginia gathered at the LaFayette Hotel to hold their annual runion. The reunion was the first he had attended since his graduation in 1854.

Born in Vermont, Wilcox attended Middlebury College, situated in the heart of the Green Mountains, and then went to North Carolina to teach. When the war broke out six years later he enlisted in the Confederate artillery and served until Lee surrendered at Appomattox. Two of his brothers fought with the Union forces.

After the war, Wilson returned to North Carolina. Since his retirement 20 years ago he has lived in Norfolk. With him at the dinner last night were his son and daughter-in-law, Judge and Mrs. E. B. Wilcox, of Puerto Rico. Judge Wilcox is 65.

Among the speakers at the reunion were Samuel B. Pettengill, Representative from Indiana and Middlebury graduate; Fred Bailey, assistant director of the Budget Bureau, and Walter Husband, former Assistant Secretary of Labor.



"—how well I recall the days and long evenings when I felt tired-out and looked it."

Diplomats Are Taken for Ride In New Comedy

'His Excellency' Impales Round-Table Chicanery on Satiric Barbs.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"HIS EXCELLENCY." George Bushar and John Tuerk present a new play in three acts and five scenes by Leslie Reade. Staged by Edward Clarke Lilley; setting by Watson Barratt. Reviewed in the Belasco Theater Monday night, prior to New York opening.

—THE CAST—

Edward Milroy, M. P. ....John Williams
Keech .....Lowden Adams
The Marquis of Cumberland .....George Graham
Col. Harrison Hawley..Frank McCormack
Franklin Nevens .....Robert Shayne
Achille Lebas .....Jean Delval
Prince von Beckdorf .....Stuart Casey
Vittorio Silvestro .....Joseph Kallini
Admiral Daruma .....Bob Lewis
Ivan Godunov .....Tenen Holtz
S. M. Rudin .....Lili Valenty
Count Percy Rondylis..Donald Randolph

Leaning strongly to the left and making the people's commissar for foreign affairs of the Soviet Union the dominant figure in the play, this humorously satirical comedy of the "inside" secrets of an international conference of diplomats reveals the intrigue, the plots and counterplots that honeycomb the deliberations of those who hold the fate of nations in their hands.

The action, of which there is practically none, all takes place in an austere room in the foreign office in London, where representatives of Great Britain, the United States, France, Germany, Italy, Japan and Soviet Russia assemble to arbitrate momentous matters of state. For the most part, the delegates are seated at the long table at which the negotiations take place. The entire three acts and five scenes are played in this single setting and the "action" consists almost exclusively of the entrances and exits of the scheming emissaries bent on gaining the greatest respective advantages in the disposition of a Chinese province and its supposedly valuable oil concessions that their shrewd connivings can contrive. The entire appeal of the play reposes in the cleverly written dialogue that is bandied about the conference table.

Soviet Given Best of It.

One gathers from Author Reade's exposition of his thesis that all international conferences are pretty apt to be a complex and unscrupulous series of secret agreements, nefarious compromises and unconscionable double-crossings. In the matter of straight-dealing, the Soviet is given all the best of the argument and at times the United States is made to appear just a little ridiculous—like a kindergarten kid intruding upon a serious discussion of a group of college professors, to fashion a thin simile.

The play is soundly written—if one can accept its premise and obvious purpose—and is probably the best-acted of any of the offerings that have been presented in the Belasco Theater since its return to the ranks of playhouses presenting living drama. The cast of 12, including only one feminine character, acquit themselves handsomely in the relation—enactment is hardly the word—of an argumentative comedy that has occasional flashes of keen humor and many periods of long-drawn-out colloquy that slow the proceedings down to a snail's pace. The two scenes of the last act are by far the most enlivening and the most amusing of the five into which the three acts are divided.

Lili Valenty Makes Debut.

Appearing in the single feminine assignment "His Excellency" has to offer, that of S. M. Rudin, assistant commissar for foreign affairs in the service of the Soviet, is Lili Valenty, the Polish-German actress, making her debut on the American stage. Valenty in every physical and temperamental aspect is well suited to her role. She gives an immediately Slavic impression and reads her lines with sureness and authority. She does not, however, at all times seem to know what to do with her hands and lacks a certain stage grace that would add appreciably to the effectiveness of her portrayal. Perhaps her supposed peasant origin in the play accounts for this and makes it entirely "in character."

Valenty and Robert Shayne, cast as the young State Department career man, assisting the United States Ambassador-at-large, supply the slender thread of romance that finds its way through the maze of diplomatic chicanery that forms the basis of the play. Mr. Shayne also plays with assurance and a typically American crassness in a sphere of velvet gloves and guarded speech.

The two outstanding performances of the evening, it seemed to me, were provided by Tenen Holtz, as the Soviet commissar, and George Graham, the Marquis of Cumberland, who presided over the conference as its permanent chairman. Their reading was flawless and their characterizations beautifully sustained and convincing.

I would not say that "His Excellency" is of sufficient broad appeal to score a Broadway hit, but it is a fine piece of work in its own limited classification.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

Luise Rainer, for 'The Good Earth,' and Paul Muni, In Story of 'Emile Zola,' Are Touted to Win Again

Many Close Observers of the Cinema Foresee the Likelihood of 1936 Academy Award Winners for Best Acting Repeating in 1937, by Virtue of Ideal Assignments; Local Broadcasters Honored; Two Downtown Openings Scheduled for Today; News and Items of Gossip of the Current Theater.

IT IS one of the habitual practices—so I hear—of the roulette and slot-machine players, as well as those who wager their rubles on the bangtails, to duplicate a lucky play in the hope that the winning combination, whatever it was, will repeat. That impulse seems to be communicating itself to those who keep close tabs, as the vernacular has it, on the vagaries of the cinema.

BELL.

Already there are those who insist that after viewing her performance as Olan, in "The Good Earth," no one will be able to challenge Luise Rainer for a second consecutive Award of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences' highest award for the best feminine acting of the year.

Paul Muni, cast as Wang Lun in the same Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, seems in a fair way to come out on top for a second time within the span of two years.

Mr. Muni is completing tests for "The Story of Emile Zola," the production now under way at the Warner Brothers' studios in Burbank. This seems to be right down Mr. Muni's alley. The role of Zola—provided the story has been transcribed to the screen with any reasonable approximation of its dramatic worth—would seem to afford the winner of the 1936 award for the best male performance on the screen an admirable chance to walk off with another of the Academy's gold-plated statuettes.

The new film, to clinch the point nebulously in advance, will reunite the eminent trio who made a winner of "The Story of Louis Pasteur," the medium of Muni's preferment above all other male actors in pictures in 1936. Josephine Hutchison will appear again opposite the star—assuming that Mr. Muni has passed his examinations—and William Dieterle again will direct.

A conspicuously talented supporting cast has been assembled for the secondary roles, including Gloria Holden, Robert Barrat, Joseph Schildkraut, Bonita Granville, that precocious child actress with the amazing ability to express the utmost in juvenile emotionalism; Barton MacLane, John Litel, whose performance as the scatter-brained pilot in the stage version of "Ceiling Zero" long ago will be remembered; Jane Bryan and Donald Crisp, that veteran war-horse of the films, who has been leading man and director and now takes rank as one of the foremost character actors the films are able to boast.

Furthermore, huge sets will add an impressive visual background for the acting of the principals—Zola's various homes, the prison on Devil's Island, where Dreyfus was sent for a crime he did not commit; the French National Theater, the courtroom where Dreyfus was tried and convicted, a portion of Paris, as it was before the turn of the century—all these are being constructed on a grandiose scale on the sound stages of the Warner studios and on the lot at Burbank.

It would be unique in the history of the motion pictures if the two winners of first awards in 1936 should achieve the same eminence in 1937. It could happen.

There will be two downtown openings of new bills tomorrow in the cinema houses. At RKO-Keith's Theater, Manager Hardie Meakin is breaking out "Fire Over England." This is an Alexander Korda production in which the principal roles are played by Flora Robson, Laurence Olivier, Leslie Banks, Raymond Massey, Morton Selton, Tamara Desni and a newcomer in the person of Vivien Leigh, described by her enthusiastic stentors as one of the most beautiful young women ever to have found her way before the cameras. The story was adapted from the A. E. W. Mason best seller of the same name and concerns events in the days of Queen Elizabeth and the Spanish Armada.

At the Rialto tomorrow, Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller and Abe Tolkins, joint managers, are reviving Cecil B. De Mille's production of "The King of Kings." This opening originally was announced for Thursday but has been moved up a day on short notice.

The gentlemen whose dulcet tones enchant the ears of addicts of the loudspeaker are coming in for a bit of "big-time" recognition these next few days.

Tomorrow in the Queen Elizabeth Room—this probably in compliment to the opening of Hardie Meakin's "Fire Over England"—of the Raleigh Hotel, the Advertising Club of Washington will tender a testimonial luncheon to Gordon Hittenmark in celebration of his second anniversary in Washington as the Time Keeper Extraordinary of the National Broadcasting Co. and a young fellow whose voice has become known to thousands, maybe millions, of listeners-inners.

Beginning Friday, a feature of the stage bill at Lowe's Capitol Theater will be the personal appearance of Arthur Reilly, a radio personality whose microphone appearances number something like 2,500. His "bit" on the Capitol program is said by those who should know to be an interesting one. Art's usually are, provided he steps up his voice enough to be heard by everyone in the house.

* * * *

Jan Garber and his orchestra, popular radio and stage music-makers, will headline the stage bill at the Earle Theater the week of Friday, March 26, according to announcement made yesterday by John J. Payette, zone manager for the Warner Brothers in this territory. Garber's band needs no recommendation to the Capital's lovers of rhythmic melody at this late date. He is one of the most popular maestros who ever plays this city. It is interesting to note, in this connection, that Jan made his musical start in Washington as half of the music-purveying partnership of Jan Garber and Milton Davis, one of the National Capital's most competent pianist-conductors. They operated under the firm name of Garber-Davis. A great many people think that the Davis in this combination was Meyer Davis. It was Milton. So that sets that straight.

"The Vision," a drama in three acts and nine scenes by the Rev. John F. Burns, O. S. A., will be presented tonight, Thursday and Friday nights at 8:30 o'clock in Hurney Hall at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, under the general supervision of the Rev. John K. Cartwright, pastor.

This is a passion play that embodies the tragic scenes of the death on Calvary and the other salient events centering in Jerusalem at the time of the sacrifice of the Nazarene for the redemption of the world. A cast of the foremost of Washington's resident actors will interpret the leading roles.

A Newcomer to the American Stage

When Leslie Reade's new three-act comedy of diplomatic life opened in the Belasco Theater last night, Washington theatergoers had their first opportunity to see Lili Valenty, the Polish-German actress making her stage debut in this country. Miss Valenty's latest portrait study appears above.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, March 16.

Amateur camera fans are making themselves a dangerous nuisance to the stars. Said one actor this morning: "They are autograph pests taking postgraduate courses." And before that crack brings me a barrel of critical letters, let me hasten to state that there is a vast difference between a "fan" and an "autograph pest." Fans conduct themselves, like ladies and gentlemen, and doubtless you are one. But autograph pests will sneak right into a star's boudoir to get a signature, picture or trinket.

The new camera menace is giving Hollywood nervous jitters. A star never knows when an amateur photographer will leap from behind a pillar and snap an uncomplimentary pose. It is not that players object to being photographed, but they would like a decent chance to be prepared, and not be pictured in the act of storing a forkful of potatoes in the mouth, or erasing a drop of gravy from the tie.

Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Taylor came to me not long ago with a plea to broadcast over radio an appeal to these novice cameramen to quit jumping from behind trees to photograph them on their morning horseback rides. Twice, Barbara's horse ran away after being frightened by persons who appeared unexpectedly from roadside shrubbery.

A favorite trick of these camera hawks is to wait in preview crowds and catch a married actor in conversation with a woman other than his wife. Casually innocent meetings thus photographed might well prove grounds for malicious rumor. A pose of this sort may be especially embarrassing if snapped at a moment when the principals are crowded to close quarters by push of the surrounding mob. One actress came to me a few days ago with tears in her eyes. She had in her hand a snapshot of herself, seemingly in near embrace with a certain married actor. The picture had been mailed to her by an anonymous fan, who accompanied it with a sneering letter. She was innocent, but what can she do? She does not know who took the picture.

Strange things happen in this town. A few days ago, Hugh Herbert wore a waiter's uniform for a picture scene. For his talents, Herbert is paid $1,500 a week. Two days later, Hugh's brother Tom wore the identical uniform as an extra in another picture. For precisely the same scene, Tom was paid $7.50.

Almost since inception, Hollywood has been a city of super superlatives. If a studio produces a fair picture, it is hailed as a "wow." If the picture is really good, it is ballyhooed "terrific. And if it is very, very good (mind you, I admit that many of them ARE very, very good), it is surrounded with such terms as "epic" and "colossal."

So I was not surprised the other night when I attended a cribbage party at the home of Director Richard Wallace, and read the inscription on a tiny silver loving cup donated as a special prize by Writer Lew Foster. It proclaimed: "To the CHAMPION cribbage player of the WORLD."

Comedy Aimed At Hollywood Scores Again

'Boy Meets Girl,' Spewack Travesty at National With New Cast.

"BOY MEETS GIRL." George Abbott presents the comedy in three acts and seven scenes by Bella and Samuel Spewack. Staged by Mr. Abbott; settings by Anne Lundborg. A return engagement at the National Theater, reviewed Monday night by Mary Harris.

That steaming Hollywood bouillebases, "Boy Meets Girl," is to an audience what candy is to a baby. The second visit of this show to Washington in a few months again seem to be an undiluted delight to last night's National audience.

The last "boy Meets Girl" and the current production, it must be emphasized, are by entirely different companies. And with no derogation of the earlier offering, the present visitors offer a tighter, smoother performance, and naturally one that is more amusing.

Two uninhibited scenario writers are informed by Susie, waitress in the studio commissary, that she is "in a condition." Their kind, if irresponsible, hearts simmer with the milk of human kindness and they determine to put the unborn and unfathered child into pictures. The first act curtain rings down with Writer No. 1 bellowing into the telephone, "Send a doctor. And we want the blankety-blankedest confinement you've got."

That gives you the idea. The second and third acts have equally magnificant moments. The boys provide an emergency father for the infant. They put their protege on the screen where he attains immediate and illegitimate success. Naturally such coups have their unforeseen results. The boys lose their jobs and baby "Happy" is tossed out of the pictures for morality reasons. "But there's always a happy ending to every motion picture show." "Boy Meets Girl" is no exception.

Betty Field, as Susie, who has the ill fortune to get "in a condition" but whose great ambition is to attend high school, is tops in the show. She plays her part with a dumb innocence you'll love. Clinton Sundberg and Donald MacDonald do well by themselves as the writers who set up as Susie's guardians. Nigel Blake as the emergency father is not only a handsome but a convincing young actor.

All the others of the cast who contribute their bits to the helter-skelter of fun, do their parts extremely well.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, March 15.

A FEW days before Shirley Temple celebrated her birthday the youngster whispered to Song Writers Mack Gordon and Harry Revel that, if they wished to present her with a birthday gift, she'd appreciate a parrot . . . The tunesmiths toured the Los Angeles bird shops, until they finally selected a macaw. The bird, according to the owner, could speak only two words, "Hello" and "Goodby." They purchased it and delivered it to Shirley . . . Three days later Mrs. Temple phoned the song writers and ordered them to rush over immediately. When they arrived, breathless, they discovered the distraught mother holding her hands tightly over both of Shirley's ears—while the macaw shouted: "Shut the damn door, shut the damn door, shut the damn door!"

NAT HOLMAN and Eddie Rickenbacker disrupted the Joe Cook program last week. Holman, introduced as a world-famous New York athlete, suddenly spoke his lines with a clipped, British accent. And Rickenbacker, introduced as a heroic war ace, barely could read his lines—because his hands trembled with mike-fright . . . Paul Sydell and his dog, Spotty, were assigned to the Number 2 spot at the Chez Paree in Chicago. Sydell complained, but to no avail. When he threatened reprisal, the manager asked: "What're you going to do about it?" . . . "I'll get hunk," Sydell vowed. "I'll bring the dog up to hate you."

BEATRICE LILLIE'S film contract is on its way now to Emanuel Cohen at Paramount. Her first picture will be with Bing Crosby. She starts August 15 . . . Al & Lee Reiser, who are cousins, insist that they'll establish legal precedent shortly, by adopting each other as brothers . . . Thurday evening, a member of the cast of "Sun-Kissed" suddenly appeared on stage, although it wasn't his cue. While the other actors were bewildered, he seated himself on the prop-couch, and threw a kiss to the audience. Charles Coburn later announced that the actor was ill. The actor is Sidney Palmer. His role is that of a hale blood-donor!

MANUEL QUEZON, President of the Philippines, has been stepping around Broadway's hot-spots. The other night he visited the Crystal Garden of the Ritz-Carlton, and never missed dancing a tango . . . Basil Fomeen, noting that the President arose to dance every time a tango was played, debated whether to ask Quezon for a request number—and run the risk of a request for some Spanish melody new to him. But he made inquiry and Quezon requested—"Orchids in the Moonlight."

* * * *

GOODMAN ACE, taking his cue from F. D. R., wants four more judges to pack the officials' box at Tropical Park . . . Leopole Stokowski has become a fervent convert to swing music . . . Ruby Newman's band follows Glen Gray's into the Rainbow Room . . . Ernest Truez and his two sons, who never have appeared on the stage together, will make their first joint appearance—at the Lambs Gambol next Sunday . . . The Beth-El Hospital's benefit show is at Mecca Temple tonight . . . Two film companies already are trying to sign away Dick Himber's Gibson Girl . . . Butch Towers, the Broadway betting commissioner, took an impoverished beggar into a restaurant yesterday and bought him a meal. The hungry man then learned the identity and profession of his benefactor. "Anything else?" Butch asked him. "Yes," was the reply, "one thing. Can you trust me with a two-horse parlay until tomorrow?"

* * * *

REX COLE walked into Jack & Charlie's last night, just as the radio began playing hill-billy music . . . Ramon, at the door, asked him: "Isn't that music pretty? . . . Cole nodded . . . "Say, Mr. Cole," Ramon queried, "weren't you the first to popularize mountain-music on the radio?" The industrialist nodded . . . "It sorta gets you, doesn't it?" the youngster continued . . . "Yes," Cole agreed, "it gets you. At least it got me—for a million bucks."

* * * *

JOE & BETTY LEE opened at the Hollywood Wednesday evening—opened to a roomful of celebrities who applauded each of their dance turns. They were elated at the response, for their ambition has been to dance before Broadway's names, whose influence might result in better engagements . . . They therefore were elated, a short time later, to their queries, were assured: "Yes, don't worry. There'll be plenty of celebrities present on opening night" . . . And plenty of celebrities did come. In fact, there were so many of them present, and their tables crowded the ringside so much, that Joe & Betty Lee couldn't go on—when they were signed for the Versailles Restaurant—and, in response because there was no dance room.

This Morning
WITH SHIRLEY POVICH

Orlando, Fla.

The midst of a five-hit, four-run batting rally is no time to start admiring a pitcher's delivery, but it was under these distressing conditions that Bucky Harris acquired a new-found respect for the pitching of Jack Salveson.

To the 200 natives and assembled correspondents at Tinker Field yesterday when the bespectacled Salveson was serving a stream of base hits up to the hitters, the most obvious thing at the moment was that Salveson was, as the saying goes, getting his ears pinned back. He couldn't get anybody out, and his debut in a Washington uniform was apparently as sour as a pickled lemon.

POVICH.

But Bucky Harris, sitting there in the dugout with an appraising eye, was waxing positively enthusiastic over the performance of his new pitcher.

When Salveson's chore on the mound was finished, the Nats' manager hailed him.

"Say, Jack, what was that thing you slipped past Johnny Stone twice—a knuckler?"

* * * *

"And how about that one Joe Kuhel bit on—the knuckler too?"

"Yeah, that was my knuckler, too."

"Nice work, Jack."

* * * *

In the clubhouse, later, the Nats' manager was still quite captivated by that knuckle ball. "How about that Salveson?" he asked Clark Griffith. "That's the best knuckle ball I've seen since Urban Shocker used to make Goose Goslin miss his by 2 feet. I never even suspected he had a knuckler. Nobody ever told me about it.

* * * *

"I don't care how many runs they got off him today. Whenever he threw 'em that knuckler he had 'em licked. He didn't use it much, just in a couple of spots, but it was a beaut. He didn't have much of a fast ball, and he wasn't throwing any curves, but he's not ready yet. If that knuckle ball he showed me today isn't any flash in the pan, he's going to give those fast-ball hitters fits."

* * * *

True enough. Salveson had never professed any talent as a knuckleball artist, but he's been aching to try it ever since he came into the big leagues five years ago as the last rookie ever signed by the late John McGraw.

"In college, I always thought I had a pretty good knuckler, but McGraw caught me throwing it one day and raised hell," said Salveson. "He wasn't interested. Young pitchers weren't supposed to throw knuckle balls he said. 'Keep that thing in your pocket and you'll always have it,' he told me in that biting way of his. He was the great McGraw and I was just a kid, and he scared me out of it.

* * * *

"Out there on the Coast, they wouldn't let me use it either. The Los Angeles manager said I was doing pretty good with my fast ball—I won 21 and lost only 7 out there last season—and he didn't want me experimenting. But I've been fooling around with it on the sly for three or four years."

* * * *

And then, as an afterthought, Salveson continued: "Say, this Bucky Harris is all right, isn't he? He gave me the office to go ahead and develop my knuckler. I think I can make it stick."

* * * *

At least one other of Harris' ball players thinks the Nats' manager is an all right guy. The fellow is Ben Chapman, whom Harris acquired from the Yanks last summer in the Jake Powell swap.

Chapman, labeled as a disgruntled ball player when the Yanks traded him to Washington, has been happy with the Nats and he credits his liking for Harris as the chief reason.

* * * *

"Say, it's a pleasure to work for Bucky after being with that New York outfit," said Chapman. "With this club, a fellow has some freedom. He doesn't have to take orders and like it. I can reason with Harris.

"The first thing Bucky told me when I joined the Nats was that I didn't have to wait for any sign to steal—that I could go down whenever I thought I had an edge on the pitcher or catcher, and there wouldn't be any complaints no matter what happened; that is, unless I took a lot of foolish chances.

* * * *

"But what I like best in the way Bucky runs this team is that he lets a fellow help his batting average up there at the plate. With the Yanks, I didn't dare to hit if the count was 3 and 1 or 3 and 0. McCarthy always made us wait the pitcher out and take the next one or two.

"Hell's bells, that's when the hitter's got the edge. Bucky lets a guy hit those cripples in that kind of a situation, and don't think it doesn't help the old batting average. Bucky knows, too, that that's what they pay off on when they make out that new contract. He gives the guys on this club a break."

Eastern and Cadets Win In Tourney

Sherwood High Loses; Bethesda-Chevy Chase Is Beaten, 24-16.

By Bob Garrison.

Eliminating two of the stronger suburban competitors, Eastern High, defending champion, and St. John's Prep advanced to the second round of the fifth Metropolitan Championship tournament which got under way last night at the Tech High gym. Eastern trounced Sherwood High, 34-21, and St. John's avenged an earlier season defeat at the hands of Bethesda-Chevy Chase, 24-16.

It was the nightcap of the double-header which offered the best in the way of excitement. St. John's, fresh from the Washington and Lee tournament, was off its game and appeared flashy only in spots. They were missing shot after shot in the second period and nearly blew an 8-2 lead, coming out of the half ahead by a bare 2 points, 10-8.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase, rugged in spots, still possessed enough class to win handily.

The opener was almost a runaway affair. Eastern, with Clint Quantrille leading the way, ran up an 8-0 lead on Sherwood. Although it looked for awhile as if the Montgomery County School would catch the Lincoln Parkers, the Light Blue team forged ahead, 16-13, at half and widened that margin to 21-17 going into the last period. Quantrille and Claude Colley combined to score 13 points in the last quarter and complete the rout.

G. W.'s Cubs on Way Out of Tourney

Scrambles such as this marked the semifinal fraces in The Post's A. A. U. tournament last night, in which District WPA eliminated the George Washington Freshmen, defending champions, 48 to 41.

WPA Upsets G. W. Freshmen, G-Men Win in A.A.U. Tourney

Colonials Bow, 48-41; Sleuths Oust Rinaldis, 41-21; Near-Capacity Crowd Sees Post Semifinals.

By John R. Vosburgh.

While Mr. J. Edgar Hoover beamed approvingly, his Bureau of Investigation basket tossers tossed the Rinaldi Tailors out of The Post's A. A. U. basketball tournament last night with a 41-to-21 beating after Commissioner George Allen's District WPA wizards had upset George Washington University's freshmen and defending champions, 48 to 41, at the Heurich gymn.

In such fashion, the G-men and WPA spun into the final round of the tournament, qualifying to battle for the championship, Thursday night.

A near-capacity crowd of 700 watched the double-header.

Not without a struggle did G. W.'s scrappy cubs succumb to the high-scoring pressure of Commissioner Allen's cagers. A bit ironic for the Freshmen, however, was the role played by bland Chick Hollidge, erstwhile member of the Freshmen who flunked off the team.

The 12 points piled up by Mr. Hollidge and the business-like manner in which he outplayed big, bulky Joe Headstream, the Freshmen's Texas center, were the chief factors in ousting the Buff and Blue boys from the tournament. On the other hand, the foul-shooting of the District team combined devastatingly with the foul-committing of the Freshmen and it takes no mathematician to discover the WPA won from the free-shot marker.

Not so impressively did the Freshmen open defense of their title. With Dope Dean, Hollidge and Reds Scheible working with all their old-time Eastern High smoothness, and then some, WPA sailed to a 6-0 lead. Then the Freshmen hit a scoring streak which all but jolted Coach Davy Keppel's cagers off their heels.

Led by Meyer Aronson, tough little New Jersey sensation, who scored 19 points, the Colonial Cubs converted the 6-0 deficit into a 16-6 lead of their own. Scheible led a WPA upswing to 16-11 and to draw away again to lead at the half, 24-18.

It was hot and heavy going in the second half, with Hollidge and Aaronson swishing the hoop like a couple of expert snipers. The scrappy former All-New Jersey schoolboy star finally pulled the Freshmen up to the short end of a 34-33 score and Joe Guberskey, a Brooklyn product, led another rally which brought the Freshmen to a 38-37 count. The collegians couldn't quite tie the score, however, and with four minutes to go, WPA led, 45-37. It was too big a lead for the Frosh to do anything about it.

The Investigation victory was even more impressive. The Rinaldis took leads of 4-0 and 8-2, but that was the nearest the Tailors came to sewing up the ball game. Tommy Folliard, doughty Rinaldi forward, led a valiant counter-charge to the G-man assault throughout, but the towering Investigation squad, polished in their maneuvers, breezed into the finals like a snowball rolling downhill.

Ray Ingram Trounces Defoe, Looms as Gevinson's Equal

700 Fans Brave Snowstorm to See Battle; Defoe Floored for Nine After Foul.

By Bill McCormick.

Ray Ingram pushed Lou Gevinson right out of the spotlight and established himself as the best featherweight in the District by soundly trouncing Johnny DeFoe in a 10-round feature bout at Turner's Arena last night.

A crowd of about 700 braved a nasty snowstorm and poured just a bit less than $900 into the box office. DeFoe had three times whipped Danny London, who "ran out" on the Ingram fight.

London only a few weeks ago knocked out Johnny Pena, who had just finished defeating Gevinson. The ringworms are thus firm in their belief that Ingram is a better fighter than Lou.

Ingram served notice of the fate that awaited DeFoe in the first round. DeFoe sank a wicked right hand deep in Ingram's groin. Ingram almost literally foamed at the mouth in anger as he bounced back in towards the New York 126-pounder, with his left hand spitting dynamite.

Two of those lefts found their mark on John's chin, and DeFoe folded into the canvas. He was lucky to be able to pull himself from the floor at "nine."

From then on Ingram kept a left hand poked into DeFoe's features at all times. He occasionally rammed home a jarring right to the head or body, just to lend emphasis to the beating he was administering.

DeFoe has beaten many of the best featherweights in the business. Not so long age he held to a draw Mike Belloise, recognized as ruler of the division in New York. Five months ago, DeFoe dropped a split, and much disputed, decision to Henry Armstrong in California. On New Year's Day, 1936, DeFoe scored a technical knockout over Howard Scott, the District lightweight champion.

Bobby Dechter won a unanimous decision from Joe Temes in an eight-round lightweight semifinal.

Fight Results

Turner's Arena—Ray Ingram, 128¼, Washington, won decision from Johnny Defoe, 127¾, New York (10).

Jimmy Jones, 156¼, Baltimore, won decision from Bob Turner, 158, Newport News (6).

Doug Swetnam, 126½, drew with Joe Decarlo, 130, Baltimore (6).

Philadelphia—John Henry Lewis decisioned Hans Birkie, of Berkeley, Calif., ten rounds.

Richmond—Nick Camarata, 132½, Richmond, Va., won ten-round decision over Jimmy Tramberia, 134½, Baltimore, Md.; Frank Tymosko, 192, Richmond, Va., won second round knockout over Jimmy Ferro, 215, Baltimore, Md.; Jack Mathews, 138½, Richmond, Va., won six-round decision over Tony Colonna, 141¾, Newport News, Va.; Brooks Bowen, Richmond, Va., won second round knockout over Joe Gorman, 132½, Richmond, Va.

The two local larrupers turned in a performance as dreary as the weather.

In a brace of six-round preliminaries, Jimmy Jones won a split decision over Bob Turner and Doug Swetnam worked to a draw with Joe DeCarlo.

Lewis, Kuhel, Travis Make Decisive Blows; Newsom Is Pounded

Cascarella Makes Best Showing of Pitchers in Intra-Club Battle; Winners Begin Assault on Chase; McNeely Triples.

By Shirley Povich,
A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 15.—The Shanty Hogan A. C., whose strategy consisted of grabbing the bat far down on the handle and managing a lusty follow through, won the championship of Tinker Field today.

The Hogans were master-minded into a 7-2 victory over the Ben Chapmans by the managerial stratagems of Shanty, himself, who brought deep-toned commands up from the billowing folds of his anterior and confounded the opposition by the frankness of his tactics.

"Never mind this inside baseball stuff, fellas," admonished Shanty in his team's pregame conclave in the Nats' dressing room. "Get out there and powder that pill." This the Hogans proceeded to do. With Buddy Lewis, Joe Kuhel and Cecil Travis providing the decisive blows, the Hogans blasted young Kendall Chase for three runs in the second inning, and in the fifth inning of the six-inning affair, they attended to Mr. Buck Newsom.

Five hits they crammed into the proceedings against Newsom in that fifth, and four runs they extracted from him. Cecil Travis singed Newsom's shirt sleeves with a whistling liner through the box; Johnny Mihalic thumped a long double to left; a couple of scratchy hits followed, and then Johnny Stone whacked a double to left-center that may be still rolling.

Croonin' Joe Cascarella emerged as the pitching hero of the brief proceedings, yielding only four hits and one run in the three innings he worked for the Hogans. Bill Phebus chucked the last three innings for the Hogans and yielded five hits and a pair of runs. A pair of lusty doubles by Newsom and Chapman accounted for one run in a short-lived rally in the sixth.

Coach Earl McNeely, who has not partaken of any batting practice, stirred reminiscences of his sensational hitting for the present winning Nats of 1924-25 when he spanked a long triple to right field for the Chapmans in the second inning.

Lanahan to Pitch Against Giants Today

By a Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 15.—Done with their semi-comic intra-squad games, the Nats swing into the grapefruit league season tomorrow at Tinker Field where the New York Giants, fresh from Cuba, will provide the opposition.

Displaying his impatience to learn to what extent he may be able to depend upon the pitching of young Dick Lanahan this season, Bucky Harris today announced that Lanahan would be on the firing line against the Giants.

The rookie left-hander who represents Harris' chief pitching hope among the new blood on the club has been assigned the first three innings' chores. The remaining six innings will be divided by grizzled Pete Appleton and left-handed Syd Cohen.

Buddy Myer, still suffering from the pain of a stiff neck, will be excused from the line-up and Johnny Mihalic will sub at second base. At the other positions, Harris plans to start his regulars and replace them with rookies in the late innings.

Joe Louis and Handlers Agree to London Bout on July 30

Elimination Survivor to Face Negro

Jacobs Confirms Match; Baer May Be Foe of Brown Bomber.

By the Associated Press

London, March 15.—Brig. Gen. A. C. Critchley, British sports promoter, said today that Joe Louis, Detroit Negro slugger, would fight in the White City Stadium here July 30 against the winner of a current "elimination series" involving heavyweights Max Baer, Walter Neusel, Ben Foord and Tommy Farr.

"Louis will fight on a percentage basis in this country because it is impossible for England to match the higher prices which are in vogue in the United States," said Critchley.

While the British promoter refused to reveal the percentage, it was believed he must have promised Mike Jacobs, matchmaker for Louis, at least $100,000.

Critchley said his talks with Jacobs regarding interchange of fighters between the two countries mainly concerned Louis and the prospect of bringing the Deroit Negro to White City, where a crowd of 115,000 can be accommodated.

New York, March 15.—Mike Jacobs, matchmaker for Heavyweight Joe Louis, today confirmed Brig. Gen. A. C. Critchley's London announcement that Louis will fight in London July 30.

"I agreed to send Louis over there sometime in July and told Critchley to set the date," Jacobs said today. "They tell me July is a good month in the fighting business over there, and it's not so good here."

Jacobs also said he may keep Louis over there for more than one match if conditions are favorable.

Baer sailed for Europe last week.

Tommy Farr Beats Foord; Keeps Title

London, March 15 (U.P.).—Tommy Farr, British heavyweight champoin, retained his title tonight by outpointing Former Champion Ben Foord, of South Africa, in a 15-round fight at Harringway Arena before a crowd of 8,000.

Foord started strong and floored the champion with a hard left to the jaw in the first round, but Farr bounced to his feet after taking a one count and slugged his way to the decision and the right to fight Former World Champion Maxie Baer here April 15.

Farr outboxed the South African most of the way, but Foord kept swinging a wild left that spelled danger when it landed. The titleholder floored Foord in the eighth for a count of three, and then concentrated on wearing the challenger down with a two-fisted body attack.

Shenandoah Event Draws D. C. Boxers

Golden Gloves Tourney Is Valley Attraction.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., March 15.—Final pairing of matches in the third annual Shenandoah Golden Glove tournament that will be held here Friday night, were made here today by members of the boxing committee. The bouts range in weight classes from 95 to heavyweight and include about 14 bouts.

Maj. Harvey L. Miller, secretary of the District of Columbia Boxing Commission and coach of Maryland's Southern conference boxing champions will referee the bouts. Among the Washington sportswriters asked to attend the fights as judges are Bill McCormick and Lew Atchison, of The Post.

'Y' Duelers Will Meet Y. M. H. A. Tomorrow

The Y. M. C. A. fencing team will cross sabers with the Y. M. H. A. swordsmen in a St. Patrick's Day tournament, tomorrow night, in the Central "Y" gym at 8 o'clock.

Preparing his charges for the interstate championships to be held March 20, Maj. Edward Dyer is expecting them to reach close to peak form in their duals tomorrow night. Maryland, Delaware and District teams will compete in the interstates which will be held at the Central "Y," here.

Run, Dodgers, Run!

Clearwater, Fla., March 15 (U.P.).—The Brooklyn Dodgers today hired Percy Beard, former world champion hurdler, now track coach at the University of Florida, to teach them how to run.

Crucial Court Battle.

Alexandria, Va., March 15.—The crucial game in second-half play of the local Senior League will be played tomorrow night at Armory Hall when the Kendrick Flashes, unbeaten occupants of first place, oppose the Times-Herald five, beaten only once this season.

Federal League Meets.

The Federal Baseball League will be reorganized for the 1937 campaign tonight at 8 o'clock at a meeting scheduled at the Atlas Sport Shop. Managers of all teams interested in obtaining franchises are requested to attend.

Noted Fight Trainer Tells How to Avoid 'Balloon Tires'

'On-Edge' Fighters Not Fit to Live With, But No Reason Why Average Person Should Have Lack-Lustre Eyes.

(This is the second in a series of articles on "How to Box," written by a pint-sized typewriter puncher with no more muscle than a rheumatic oyster. Admitting he can't whip a bowl of cream, the writer has turned to masters of the boxing game for inside information on their specialties.)

By Bill McCormick.

Yesterday we left our pupils developing rhythm and grace, according to the Benny Leonard formula, by poking holes in the air.

If the neighbors haven't had you hauled away in the goofy wagon, your shadow-boxing experience should have shown you by now how woefully inadequate your physical equipment would prove in a real scuffle.

With no thought of getting anyone in top boxing condition, we shall hear from Ray Arcel, generally considered the best conditioner in the business.

For many reasons striving for the proverbial "pink" of condition is foolish unless one is a fighter. In the first place, fighters in the pink are not fit to live with. Their very physical perfection makes them nervous, irritable and inclined to bite large chunks out of their venerable grandmothers.

In the second place, fighters in top form are as susceptible to illness and disease as newborn babes. They must be carefully protected from drafts, their water must be absolutely pure and their food must be of the very best. Little things that wouldn't bother you or me will make an "on-edge" fighter very ill.

Roadwork the Thing.

Still, there is no reason why we should go around with balloon tires of fat around our midsections, lackluster eyes and enough aches and pains every day to keep a hypochondriac busy a lifetime. From the fight game we can learn things about diet and conditioning that will painlessly develop washboard tummys, bright eyes and ward off, if not cure, such ailments as arthritis and other aches and pains.

Ray Arcel, who has trained as many champions as any man in the game, is a firm believer in roadwork. As do many other top conditioners, he believes it the most generally beneficial of any training routine. It builds up wind, strengthens legs and increases stamina beyond the average person's conception. This it does without straining the heart or leaving any other bad after effects.

In the beginning road work should be done over level ground. It should always be taken at a leisurely trot, never at high speed. Whenever possible, road work should be done on a cinder path or grass.

Even while doing road work, one should not neglect shadow boxing. Every hundred yards or so a man doing road work should stick up his hands and go through a brief session of fighting the air—while still moving toward his destination.

A person in average condition should not attempt more than one mile on the road in the beginning. Roadwork should, if possible, be done before breakfast. The air then is crisp and cool and delightful to gasping lungs. Early morning exercise also fits nicely into the regular routine of meals.

As the lungs expand, the legs strengthen and general stamina is increased, the morning jaunt may be done over hilly ground and can be extended to as much as five or six miles.

A light punching bag is helpful, but not necessary. Its use not only strengthens the arm muscles, but speeds up reactions and sharpens the eyesight.

Rope-skipping undoubtedly makes one lighter on his feet, but many authorities, including Gene Tunney, believe it weakens the heart. Arcel refuses to take sides in the argument. He lets a fighter indulge in the schoolgirl pastime if he wishes.

In the matter of diet, Arcel and trainers of his caliber have it all over many who profess to be experts on the subject.

"The most important thing is to avoid too much starch and greasy food, especially the latter," Arcel insists. "Improper eating fills the system with toxic poison. Comes a muscular strain, the poison settles in the weak spot—and we have arthritis. From that can come almost anything."

A fighter's breakfast usually is very heavy. This is because it has been many hours since his last meal and roadwork has aroused an appetite that would do justice to a broken-down wrestler.

Fruit juice, or prunes, cooked cereal, hard toast, tea with lemon and poached or soft-boiled eggs comprise the usual training camp breakfast. Plenty of everything is served, unless the fighter is trying to whittle himself into a certain weight division.

Cooked Eggs?

In really careful camps, cooked eggs are substituted for boiled ones. To cook an egg, one places it in hot—not boiling—water and allows it to soak until done. A cooked egg looks and tastes the same as a boiled one, but it digests easier.

Some fighters do not eat a midday meal. Others partake very sparingly.

Dinner, eaten long before the fashionable hour of eight, is another heavy meal. Cooked and raw vegetables, broiled meats,

Suspension of Danny London Asked

The District Boxing Commission yesterday requested the National Boxing Association to impose an indefinite suspension on Danny London, the New York featherweight who ran out on a bout with Ray Ingram at Turner's Arena last night.

Suspension by the N. B. A. is practically automatic when requested by a State affiliated with the national organization.

The District Commission also forwarded a summary of the case to commissions of New York, Oregon, Washington and California, which are not affiliated with the N. B. A.

London is believed to have left New York before the bout with Ingram for the Coast and the commission desires to forestall his getting any bouts there.

POST NOTES ON fishin'

By Bill Ackerman

At the annual meeting of the National Capital Casting Club last week, officers elected for the coming year were Jay Reed, president; George F. Simon, vice president; Harold Vermeule, secretary and treasurer, and W. E. Killingsworth, field captain. For instructors, Chuck Johnson for the plug and George Cooke for the fly.

In regard to these instructors, a few explanatory words are in order. Two afternoons each week, during the entire summer, and for no more than their love of the sport, these two pass up their own fun so that they may teach anyone and everyone who would like to learn the game.

The Casting Club extends a special invitation to readers of Post Notes to come out (weather will govern starting day and will be noted here), get acquainted, and learn how to cast a tiny, three-eighths ounce plug in the ring, at a distance of 60 or 70 feet. If it is the flyrod that takes your fancy, they will teach you that, so that you can enjoy the sport offered by the many mountain streams of this section.

There is no obligation whatever, not even the necessity of joining the club unless you wish to do so. These good sportsmen put their time and tackle at your disposal, with the hope that it will be interesting enough to bring you regularly each week, to the Seventeenth street end of the Reflecting Pool.

NEW JERSEY'S State Fish and Game Commission announces the stocking of their streams is under way and will continue until the season opens on April 15.

Iced trucks are being used to transport the fish, many of which are of large size. The season closes on July 15 and opens again on September 1 for a 30-day period.

PRESS DISPATCHES describe as "almost a miracle" the catching last week at Bimini, B. W. I., of a 540-pound blue marlin with a handline, by a New York sportsman, F. B. Hoffman.

Had he caught it with a handline, and as American fishermen use one—it would have been a miracle—but he didn't. Hooked at 4:35 p. m., it fought for over three hours against an 18-ounce tip and 36-thread-linen line, and died at the 1,200-foot level, during a last mad sound for freedom. It was impossible to raise this dead weight with rod and reel, so it was, in the vernacular, hand-lined. Boated at 8:05 p. m., it weighed 540 pounds.

Maryland mountain streams, as well as those of Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina, are better fished with rods of 2 or 3 ounce tips and a length of 6½ feet. The longer northern rods will be found not quite so good, due to the low hanging heavy cover.

The ordinary cast on any of our streams is seldom over 20 feet—the longest, 35 or 40, so the longer rod is not needed to get the distance necessary on our north country streams.

Men Past 40

Many men at 40, in perfect health, without an ache or pain, wonder why they aren't as strong and as vigorous as they were 5 or 10 years ago. Mental and physical fatigue is the cause in the majority of cases. Fortunately this condition can be helped by the use of a recently discovered hormone. This hormone stimulates the glandular system to greater activity—helps build up lowered vitality.

This hormone is now available, together with other valuable ingredients in Zo-ak Tablets (Blue Box for men—Orange Box for women) and are sold and recommended by Unity Drug Stores and all chains. Zo-ak is the formula of a well known American physician so you can take it with confidence. It contains no nux vomica (strychnine) or any other harmful drugs. A booklet called "For Men Who Want to Live," will be sent in a plain sealed envelope by Zo-ak Co., 58 W. 45th St. N. Y.

Zoic Wins 5th Florida Race in Seven Starts

Stubbs Run Into Defeat By Gelding

Higher Cloud Is Second in Vest-Pocket Field; Harp O'Gold Wins.

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., March 15.—H. E. Enger's 4-year-old Zoic, one of the most improved horses in winter racing, today scampered off with the Fort Dallas Handicap, which attracted a small but select field of sprinters. The 4-year-old gelding, which started a winning streak at Hialeah Park running as a $1,500 plater, now has won five races in seven starts this season. He led home Mrs. Emil Denemark's Higher Cloud by a length and a half. F. L. Tyler's Finisher was third, four lengths behind and a head before T. B. Martin's Stubbs. Only four started.

It was a very open betting race, with the straight pool money wagered on the quartet as follows: Stubbs, $5,204; Higher Cloud, $5,203; Zoic, $4,728, and Finisher, $4,117. Thus Stubbs and Higher Cloud were virtually even choices. Zoic, ridden by Bob Wholey, paid $7.30 and covered the 6 furlongs in 1:11 2-5. The best weather since the meeting opened prevailed for the afternoon's sport, although a shower fell in the morning.

Stubbs, a gelding that likes to get out in the clear, could not cope with the speed of the remarkable Zoic. The latter, after a head-and-head battle with the Martin color-bearer in the top of the stretch, drew off as Stubbs faltered. Higher Cloud, shut off at the far turn, gamely kept trying on the inside and proved an easy second over Finisher. The latter tired trying to keep within range of the pace.

In one of the tightest photo-finishes of the meeting, Harp o' Gold got up on the outside to nose out Bravo Caruso, which was coupled with Grand Jester and favorite, in the first race. Third money went to Sir Gay, one of the outsiders, a half-length behind. Bravo Caruso looked a winner while holding a daylight lead into the last furlong. Harp o' Gold, always close in pursuit, finished steadily and wore down the pacemaker right on the wire, to return $11.40. The time for the 6 furlongs, made over a good track, was 1:14 3-5.

Fight Trainer Tells Condition Secrets

whole wheat bread and the inevitable tea with lemon are on the menu.

Fight trainers have one practice that is frowned upon by practically all medical authorities, but it certainly works for their boxers. After each big meal a trainer will rout his pug out into the open for a long walk, to "shake down the food," as he expresses it.

Medical authorities tell us that after a meal, perfect relaxation is in order to permit the entire system to concentrate on digestion. Fight trainers absolutely disregard this rule and the digestive apparatuses of their charges work smoothly.

For those not desiring to become pugs, Arcel recommends practically the same diet, except that milk, coffee and not too many sweets may be added.

Strangely enough, alcohol is not strictly taboo, even to a fighter in training. Some trainers recommend a glass of beer or ale after a workout. This is to replace moisture through perspiration. Of course, anything even remotely resembling overindulgence is against the rules. One hangover can wipe out weeks of training.

Jim Corbett once found himself "going stale" while training for an important bout. Staleness is caused by drawing too fine an edge on physical condition. The eyes lose their snap, so do punches and co-ordination blows up like Joe Louis after a three-point landing is made on his chin.

Corbett warded off the staleness and snapped back into fine fighting fettle by consuming a quart of champagne, much to the alarm of his handlers.

(Tomorrow's article will deal with two of the best punches in the game—the left jab, as practiced by Tommy Loughran, and Jock Dempsey's left hook.)

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPINDLETOP, $8.70, $4.80, $4.00; LADY CHARLOTTE, $12.80, $7.20; SHRED, $11.90.

SPINDLETAP broke alertly, was kept on the inside all the way, drew away entering the stretch, but was driving hard at the end. LADY CHARLOTTE broke in a tangle, went up on the outside and closed fast. SHRED, very rank on the way to the post, got away well, showed speed and made a game effort. MAETAKE came from far back and finished gamely under very weak handling. BESTEST tired. GREY FLASH had speed for a quarter mile. LILITH is worth noting.

FOURTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 3:50. Off at 3:58. Winner, John C. Clark, Jr.'s ch. f. (3), by Challenger II—Sun Thor. Trained by W. E. Martin. Value to winner, $600; second, $120; third, $60; fourth, $20. Time, 1:40 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MARINELLA, $4.90, $3.20, $2.60; HORNET, $4.60, $3.90; OPOCA, $3.60.

MARINELLA was sent to the front going into the first turn, rated along, drew away easily in the final furlong. HORNET was a stout contender all the way and was next best. OPOCA was hard ridden and had no excuse. DAY DAWN broke slow, worked her way up and finished fast. KENNER stopped.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. The Fort Dallas Handicap. Purse, $1,000 added. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place easily. Went to post at 4:25. Off at 4:26½. Winner, H. E. Enger's br. g. (4), by Prince of Wales—Zanobia II. Trained by C. A. Grande. Value to winner, $725; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:11 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ZOIC, $7.30, $3.60; HIGHER CLOUD, $3.50. (No show money.)

ZOIC got away very fast, raced STUBBS into submission in the first half mile, drew away along the turn and gamely stalled off the determined bid of HIGHER CLOUD. The latter was abruptly cut off at the far turn, remained on the inside, slipped through entering the stretch and was next best. FINISHER made his bid turning out of the backstretch, but faltered in the last furlong. STUBBS was used up racing with the winner.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. The Casa Loma Handicap. Purse, $1,000 added. For 3-year-olds, in Class C. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 4:55. Off at 4:57. Winner, Mrs. Charles S. Bromley's ch. g. (3), by Genie—Sunayr. Trained by G. H. Strate. Value to winner, $740; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:38 3-5.

BAIN MARIE	(Jaekle)	110	1	1	4¹½	5	4ʰ	5	5	1.45

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUNPHANTOM, $6.90, $3.80, $3.90; HASTY WIRE, $4.90, $4.30; ZACA, $5.20.

SUNPHANTOM was allowed to rate along back of the early pace, began to move up in the run down the backstretch, assumed the lead at the middle of the turn, drew away and won nicely in hand. HASTY WIRE was well ridden. He made up his ground gradually and made a game effort. ZACA opened a wide gap early, but stopped to a walk. BAIN MARIE failed to close any ground. Her race was away below her true form.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:27. Off at 5:27½. Winner, M. A. Smith's b. f. (4), by Cotlogormor—Sequel. Trained by M. A. Smith. Value to winner, $600; second, $120; third, $60; fourth, $20. Time, 1:43 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CONTINUITY, $14.90, $5.10, $3.50; KINDRED SPIRIT, $4.00, $2.90; PRE WAR, $2.80.

CONTINUITY was lucky. She got through on the inside when KINDRED SPIRIT carried PRE WAR out and, taking the lead, just lasted to win. KINDRED SPIRIT displayed good speed and held on well. PRE WAR would have won but for being carried wide on the stretch turn. ADAMITE ran a good race.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and a furlong. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward which have not won since January 12. Start poor. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 6:00. Off at 6:01½. Winner, Mrs. G. Stewart Preece's ch. m. (5), by Carlaris—My Pet. Trained by G. S. Preece. Value to winner, $600; second, $120; third, $60; fourth, $20. Time, 1:53 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRUE CHARM, $7.90, $4.30, $3.00; TRUJILLO, $8.70, $6.10; ARGOAN, $4.00.

TRUE CHARM ran into the lead at the half mile, drew out, saved ground and won nicely in hand. TRUJILLO was in close quarters around the turn and closed with a rush when clear. ARGOAN was unable to get to the front and weakened suddenly. PRETTYLASS had no excuse. MAKEIT finished gamely.

Brophy, $9.20, Annexes New Orleans' Feature

New Orleans, March 15 (AP).—W. E. Snyder's Brophy, a steady going son of Justice F., won his third straight race and his fourth in five starts in whipping six other $1,500 platers in the mile and a sixteenth feature at the Fair Grounds today.

The 5-year-old gelding, held at $9.20 for $2, came from off the pace to win by a narrow margin of a nose from Mrs. C. C. Winters' John Tio.

The Market

Stocks Work Irregularly Lower in Less Active Trading; Volume Is Curtailed.

New York, March 15.—Commodity markets attempted to resume their forward movements, but the bond market was steady, Government issues improving with the administration of a buying tonic by the Treasury and possibly the Federal Reserve banks, and stocks performed rather drearily. Trading in stocks was sharply reduced. The stock market was flecked with shares able to rise a little, but most of them declined. A midday rally turned out to be a feeble one and closing prices were near the poorest. Cotton jumped a dollar a bale or so. May wheat rose 1⅞ cents to 136⅛ cents a bushel. London metal markets also resumed their rise.

Steel stocks at least were shaken out of their morning siesta by the midday weekly estimate of operations by the American Iron & Steel Institute. This week the industry is expected to reach a new peak of activity, at 88.9 per cent of capacity, the highest since September, 1929. Last week the estimate was 87.3 per cent and a year ago the trade rocked along at 60 per cent. Activity in steel reflects business elsewhere in the long run, but much of the present high rate of operations undoubtedly comes from demand based on expectation of higher costs, and to a certain extent therefore must be regarded as speculative.

Other trade news over the weekend was obscured by the growing tenseness of the strike in the Chrysler motor works and the numerous strikes and threats of labor trouble elsewhere. Another opportunity is presented by the Chrysler difficulty to test the measure of protection which employers may expect from constituted authority, but the tide of labor organization, higher wages, shorter hours, and rising costs of production has set in strongly. Living is going to cost more, and as soon as the present inflation in commodity prices and manufactured articles reaches the retail field, the old round of higher wage demands will start all over again.

It has become much clearer why Wall Street from the start took so much interest in the Administration's Supreme Court proposals. Wall Street grasped at once that which President Roosevelt now has admitted, namely, that new laws are desired, giving the Government complete power to carry out its ideas of credit and business management. Little more could be given than that now possessed in managing the currency and bank credit, and that is not sought. Power desired is that to fix hours, wages, production, allocation of capital for expansion and contraction, and to set prices by fiat in specific instances where credit control may not be effective.

Serious doubts exist as to the efficacy of credit control, not that in theory it cannot be accomplished, but that in practice a political body is bound to have the power under the New Deal's plan. Limited as were its powers, the Federal Reserve Board in 1919-20 and again in 1929-30 moved in the right direction, but removed as it was even then from direct political control, the board found it too much to act, as it felt obliged to do, contrary to the pressure of politicians. The Federal Reserve, which tried to halt the postwar inflation, got the 1920-23 depression, and that blame was back up to the Wilson Administration.

Credit and Rates.

Meanwhile so long as the Treasury continues to operate with a deficit, it is useless to expect credit control powers, which look ample enough under conditions of equilibrium in Government finance, to prevent the development of a bad situation. Such episodes as the crack in Government bond prices last week serve as useful reminders that no one believes in the infallibility of politicians in high office. On the contrary, less attention is bound to be paid to a radio speaker's peroration on the inviolability of the credit of the United States than so some despised money changer's suspicion that money rates are beginning to harden.

Cost Systems To Be Subject Of Dr. Person

Economist Will Address Local Accountants Tomorrow.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Tomorrow evening members of Washington Chapter, National Association of Cost Accountants, will hear Dr. Harlow S. Person, economist, talk on cost factors in power distribution. The March meeting of the chapter will be held in the gold room of the Hamilton Hotel beginning at 8 o'clock and will be preceded by a dinner at 6:30. In his address Dr. Person will discuss the question of whether a system of cost accounting can be developed for power distribution which will give the same precise results as systems used in other industrial activities. Perfection of such a system is very necessary if the Government plan of using certain power developments as measurements is to be successful.

Dr. Person's training and experience qualify him to deal with this question. He was graduated from the University of Michigan, where he studied under Henry Carter Adams, first statistician of the Interstate Commerce Commission, who directed the establishment of the basic system of accounting for railroads.

After graduation, Dr. Person was for 15 years professor of business organization and management at the Amos Tuck School of Dartmouth College. For many years he was president of the Taylor Society and its managing director in New York. For the past five years he has been engaged in consulting service in New York, in business, economics and management, and for the past three years he has devoted a considerable amount of time here as, successively, a member of the Mississippi Valley Committee, acting chairman of the water resources committee of the National Resources Board, and consulting economist of the Rural Electrification Administration.

Following his address there will be a general discussion led by E. J. Coyle, economist for the Rural Electrification Administration. C. Milton Clark, president of the chapter, will be in charge of the meeting. Accountants and accounting students are invited to attend.

Bankers and Thrift.

Bankers back from the conference of the savings division of the American Bankers Association at New York, were impressed by the need voiced there for a revival of the thrift idea among the people. Advertising campaigns to encourage the idea were advocated at the meeting by Noble R. Jones, president of the division, who said that now is the time for savings banks to devise public relations programs educating the public to the value of savings in the economic scheme.

Making suggestions for the improvement of savings banks, Mr. Jones emphasized that the great task ahead for them which they should undertake both collectively and individually, was that of renewing public interest in savings and thrift. While the work of obtaining new savings depositors should go on, he reminded that during the long period of low interest rates, there had been a lapse in savings advertising and public relations activity, the full force of which has not yet been felt.

P. R. Williams, San Francisco, vice president of the Bank of America, expressed belief that the real solution of the popularization of savings lies with the next generation, habits of the present one having become so fixed that they are unchangeable. It was his opinion that it would be time and money well spent if savings bankers concentrated to a great degree on the development of thrift in the young people.

Vice President Warren S. Shepard, of the Worcester Country Trust Co., Worcester, Mass., informed the conference that through personal loan departments, bankers are able to create a vast amount of good will for their institutions and contact noncustomers. While a well managed personal loan department assists materially in increasing business, he warned that it should not be considered a panacea for low earnings.

Public Speaking Contest.

Discussing the coming public-speaking contest of the American Institute of Banking, President Paul J. Seltzer, of the local chapter, explained that under rules for the

Steel Operations Climb to 88.9%

New York, March 15 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week advanced 1.6 points to 88.9 per cent of capacity, to a peak since September, 1929, and compared with 87.3 per cent last week, the American Iron and Steel Institute estimated today. A month ago operations averaged 81.6 per cent of capacity, while a year ago the rate was 60.0 per cent. Operations for September, 1929, were at 90.44 per cent of capacity.

Rate Is Increased On Federal Funds

New York, March 15 (AP).—An indication of rising money demand was seen today in an advance in the borrowing cost for use among banks of deposits at the Federal Reserve banks, technically known as Federal funds. The rate was boosted to ¼ of 1 per cent from ⅛, the first mark-up since February, 1934.

When banks have surplus deposits at the Reserve banks above legal requirements, banks often lend the funds among themselves for settling balances. With most banks heavily supplied with excess reserves the last few years, there was little demand for "Federal funds."

Bankers said, however, demand had increased lately with reduction in excess reserves by the Federal Reserve Board and increased business and speculative borrowings.

Banks File New Plan For Cotton Belt Road

St. Louis, March 15 (AP).—A plan of reorganization for the St. Louis Southwestern (Cotton Belt) Railroad was filed in Federal Court today by the Chase National Bank of New York, holder of the railroad's note for $3,500,000, and the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., of St. Louis, holding a note for $1,500,000.

Under the Cotton Belt's own reorganization plan, the $9,327,500 fourth mortgage bonds would be replaced by 4 per cent debentures. The banks' plan proposed that holders of the bonds receive 60 per cent of their face value in first terminal and unifying mortgage bonds and 40 per cent, plus 10 per cent accrued interest, in new preferred stock at $100 a share.

Refined Copper Supply Shows Sharp Decline

New York, March 15 (AP).—Visible stocks of refined copper in refineries, on consignment and in commodity exchange warehouses in the United States declined 4,349 tons during February to 138,025 tons, the lowest in years, figures made public by the Copper Institute today disclosed.

Production of refined copper for the month was 71,233 tons. Deliveries to domestic customers totaled 72,706 tons, while exports aggregated 2,876 tons, making total shipments 75,582 tons.

Westinghouse 1936 Net Over $15,000,000

Compares With $11,983,380 in 1935; Orders Gain 48%.

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 15.—In its fifty-first annual report to stockholders, issued for the year ended December 31, 1936, the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company shows its net income earned to have been $15,099,291. This net compares with $11,983,380 earned in 1935. In the report A. W. Robertson, chairman, and F. A. Merrick, president, state, in part:

"Orders received amounted to $182,521,304, an increase of 48 per cent over 1935. Sales billed totaled $154,469,031, an increase of 26 per cent over 1935.

"Unfilled orders at the end of the year amounted to $48,490,919, compared with $27,137,075 at December 31, 1935. This increase is indicative of the orders placed in 1936 for apparatus involving a long production period."

Western Electric Co.

New York, March 15.—Consolidated net earnings of Western Electric Co. and directly controlled subsidiaries totaled $18,698,049 in 1936, the annual report of the company, made public today, disclosed. This compared with $2,620,279 the preceding year. Virtually all the earnings accrued to American Telephone & Telegraph Co., which owns more than 99 per cent of the capital stock.

Sales for the year totaled $146,421,000, an increase of 38.9 per cent over the $105,417,000 reported for 1935, the report said. It added that at the close of the year the company's plants were operating on a five-day, 40-hour week at about 53 per cent of capacity compared with 27 per cent at the beginning of the year. The number of employes at the end of the year was 34,004, compared with 21,033 on January 1, 1936.

Standard Oil of Kentucky.

Louisville, Ky., March 15 (AP).—Net earnings during 1936 of the Standard Oil Co. of Kentucky, before deducting Federal income taxes, amounted to $4,435,450, as compared to $2,467,808 in 1935. President W. E. Smith revealed today in the annual report to stockholders. Sales for the year amounted to $64,841,544, an increase of 11.8 per cent over 1935. "Sales and profits for the year exceeded those of any other year since 1930," Smith said.

Phelps Dodge Corporation.

New York, March 15 (AP).—Phelps Dodge Corporation reported today for 1936 net income, after all charges except depletion, of $11,392,547, equal to $2.25 a share on 5,971,240 shares. This compares with $6,147,878 or $1.21 a share in 1935.

Louis S. Cates, president, said 1936 marked progress for the copper industry. "The outlook for 1937," he said, "appears favorable although clouded at the present time by lack of knowledge as to the ultimate effects of proposed legislation affecting the mining industry in the United States and of the heavy speculation in copper and other commodities abroad."

Pullman Co.

Chicago, March 15 (AP).—The Pullman Co., sleeping car company affiliate of Pullman, Inc., reported today 1936 transportation operations produced net earnings of $3,454,220 compared with a loss of $1,646,980 in 1935.

Steel Quotations.

Cost Systems To Be Subject Of Dr. Person

contest, opening to local candidates April 12, all speeches must be original and require not more than six minutes for delivery. Speeches for the local, District and final national contest must be on the subject, "Is the decline in the proportion of commercial loans to deposits a permanent condition, and why?"

In addition to their prepared addresses, contestants will be required to deliver, without notes, three-minute extemporaneous talks on subjects assigned by the chairmen of the contests. These subjects will be given to contestants after they have delivered their prepared speeches. They will then be given 30 minutes for private preparation without notes or assistance, after which they will speak extemporaneously.

Mr. Seltzer said that in judging the contests, equal importance will be attached to the prepared and extemporaneous speeches, and that the judges will be instructed to give the same importance to composition and delivery in making their selections. If, in the judgment of the chairmen, there are a greater number of entries in a chapter contest than can be heard in a continuous session, elimination contests for various groups will be held preceding the chapter contest.

I. C. C. Anniversary.

The fiftieth anniversary of the Interstate Commerce Commission will be celebrated April 1. On the program of the event are Senator Burton K. Wheeler, chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee; Representative Sam Rayburn, floor leader, who for 24 years was a member and chairman of the committee; Representative Clarence Lea, present chairman of the committee and a member of 16 years' standing; John J. Esch, a former commissioner; Patrick J. Farrell, a former commissioner and now chief counsel for the commission; Commissioner Clyde B. Aitchison, General Solicitor John E. Benton, of the National Association of Railroads and Utilities Commissioners; President Allan P. Matthew, of the Association of Practitioners before the Interstate Commerce Commission, and George M. Crosland, assistant director of the Interstate Commerce Commission Bureau and senior employe of the commission.

Personal.

Y. E. Booker, heading Y. E. Booker & Co., is back from a visit at Miami Beach and other Florida cities.

President C. F. Burton, of the City Bank, was another recent Florida visitor.

Bankers' Essay Contest.

"How can employes contribute to a better public understanding of banking?" is the subject for this year's essay contest sponsored by the District of Columbia Bankers Association, it was announced yesterday by Thomas J. Groom, executive vice president and cashier, Bank of Commerce & Savings, and acting president of the association.

The contest, an annual event, is open to all members of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, except bank officers and members who have been winners in any two previous contests. Writers of the three best compositions are awarded a trip to the association's convention, held this year at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 27-31, inclusive.

The subject chosen this year is of such general interest that it is believed a larger number of members will participate than usual. Bankers throughout the country are convinced that such of the criticism of their profession by the public is due to misconception of the functions and principles of its public service. The American Bankers Association has stressed the importance of meeting the situation and suggests no better way of so doing than by interesting employes in learning more about their institutions to enable them to better interpret methods and policies.

George O. Vass, vice president and cashier, Riggs National Bank; is chairman of the essay contest committee for the association. President Lanier P. McLachlen, McLachlen Banking Corporation, and F. P. H. Siddons, secretary, American Security & Trust Co., are the other members of the committee.

JANE ARDEN

Setting the Stage

By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

3-16
NO USE HANGING AROUND - WE KNOW THAT DOLL ISN'T JANE ARDEN!
THERE ARE TWO GIRLS IN THAT STATEROOM- WE'VE ONLY SEEN ONE OF THEM!
BUT THE OTHER IS THE MAID!
SAY, YOU DON'T THINK-
THEY KNOW WE'RE ON THEIR TRAIL- AND SHE'S NO DUMB-BELL- WE'LL LOOK THAT MAID OVER!
NOT BAD- MAYBE I'D HAVE A FUTURE AS A MAID!
NEITHER OF US WILL HAVE A FUTURE IF THESE SECRET AGENTS DISCOVER THE TRICK WE'RE PLAYING!

THE G-MAN!

BY GEORGE CLARK AND LOU HANLON

WHAT SHALL I DO WITH HIM, SIR?
NOW LET ME SEE!
HEY, JIMMIE, YOU DON'T MEAN IT?
WELL FIRST OF ALL, HOW CAN WE GET HIM SOME CLOTHES?
YOU MEAN THAT YOU DON'T WANT HIM ARRESTED?
AS A MATTER OF FACT HE'S MY LITTLE BROTHER AND SINCE HE'S HERE WE'LL MAKE THE BEST OF IT!
OH, I SEE, SIR?
GEE, I WAS SCARED!
SOME OF THE CABIN BOYS WILL HAVE CLOTHES AND-TELL THE PURSER TO ARRANGE FOR HIS PASSAGE!
HURRAY!

AMERICAN TYPEWR

again and again we say . . .

Look Pretty, Please!

HATS 7.50

We can't say too often, "look pretty, please"—because it's the new, the vital, the arresting way to look this spring. And to look your prettiest, start with a romantic hat. We've planned our spring collection to make your best beau take one look at you and start whispering soft nothings! Back-to-nature hats with birds' wings or flowers! Hats to remind you of Camille's demure bonnet! Sailors that would make Charles Dana Gibson create a brand new Gibson girl! It's a sentimental spring—make the most of it! And The Hecht Co.'s prices will enhance your happy mood.

Third Floor—Hat Dept.—The Hecht Co.

Gabardine Shoes
by Red Cross

Gabardine, of course, for pretty feet—because it fits like a glove, makes ankles look slimmer and makes every foot look smaller. And Red Cross Shoes will help to keep your face unwrinkled and pretty, too—because they're so marvelously comfortable, a "beauty treatment for the feet." Note the skill with which gabardine is used, the dressmaker look of the shoes—the truly perfect accent to your "look pretty, please" costumes.
